Depression Still Danger To Country, Truman Says

He Finds Economic Factors Threaten Inflation Despite Record Prosperity

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Despite an all-time record prosperity, dangerous economic factors which could lead to inflation and depression are still with us, President Truman told Congress yesterday.

In a special midyear report, Mr. Truman repeated the warnings about too high prices which he made in his economic declaration last January 8. Present full employment and "unprecedented prosperity" are being sustained by "temporary props," he said.

"As they weaken," he continued," we shall need to make many basic readjustments."

Lists Temporary Props

The theme of the report, alluded to in different aspects on almost every one of its 48 printed pages, was that consumers' real incomes were not adequate to absorb America's production, because the latter is being sold at too high prices.

The "temporary props" which are now maintaining full employment at high-price levels, the President found, are:

1. Reconversion demands of business.
2. The backlog demands of consumers for goods not available during the war.
3. Extensive use of savings and credit.
4. "An extraordinary excess" of exports over imports.

Reflects Council's Views

The President, whose report reflected in large part the views of his Council of Economic Advisors, found four specific fields for particular attention. These he termed "threats" to stability, or economic aspects which "have not followed to favorable a course" and which needed attention. They were:

1. Prices and the Agricultural Outlook.

There has been an improvement in the last six months in the price situation, the report noted. But even so, "there are many areas where price reductions still are necessary to check current or prospective declines in demand and to povide outlets for increased production."

In particular, the President was concerned with farm prices and the agricultural outlook. Bad weather and floods appear to have cut the corn crop, creating a danger, the President intimated, of speculative forces becoming active on the market. This would add another fillip to inflation.

Makes Two Recommendations

Actually, he said, the present condition of the corn crop "does not warrant a general speculative rise in food prices." Food price increases would not in themselves help alleviate shortages this year, he noted.

In this field the President made

See ECONOMIC, Page 4, Col. 3.

Highlights of the President's Midyear Economic Report

Highlights of the President's midyear economic report to Congress:

PRICES: The key factor, and still too high, compared to consumers' incomes. There are the twin dangers that a short corn crop may cause speculative increases in all farm prices, and that the new coal wage contract may be used by the steel industry for raising its prices. This would set off another wage-price inflationary spiral.

PRODUCTION: At record levels, with present gross national product at an annual rate of 225 billion dollars.

EMPLOYMENT: Also at a record of more than 60 million jobs. But some weak spots in textiles, clothing, leather and electrical machinery.

INCOMES: Consumers' "real" income has declined in the last six months.

PROFITS: At the rate of 10 per cent on net worth, for the first half of this year.

HOUSING: The sore spot. Home building less than anticipated, because of too high construction costs. Dangerous to long-term economic stability.

INVENTORIES: A healthy reduction in the rate of accumulation. They can now be increased to some degree with safety.

EXPORTS: An unexpected doubling of net exports over imports since last year. Part of this is temporary. But the foreign aid program must be continued, as the key element in winning the peace.

PROSPECTS: High prosperity can be continued, but adjustments in prices, production and income are necessary. At present, the high level is being maintained by "temporary expedients" which will ultimately decline or disappear. These are use of savings and credit, unusual export surplus and consumers' and business' backlog demands.

Poor Quality Is Latest Fear For Corn Crop

Grain Expert Says High Moisture Content Reduces Feed Value

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

America's corn crop not only may be far below early expectations, but much of it may be of low quality, Undersecretary of Agriculture N. E. Dodd warned yesterday.

Dodd told the American Society of Agricultural Engineers in Chicago that "adverse weather and floods have so delayed the progress of the corn crop, especially the Corn Belt, that soft corn, high in moisture content, low in feeding value, and of poor keeping quality is probable this fall."

Dodd sounded his warning on the eve of the special mid-July report on corn prospects. He emphasized that though the report, to be released at 3 p. m. today, may show better prospects, this good news will be largely offset by the poor quality of the harvest.

Meat Supply Affected

The speaker bore down on the danger to the Nation's meat supply that rests in corn prospects.

"I think we can expect to see an abnormally large portion of corn fed to hogs and cattle this winter," he said. "The result would be heavy livestock marketings during the winter and early spring, followed by smaller marketings and higher prices next summer.

"Should that happen, I'm afraid city customers would become very critical of our farmers even though the farmers were not at fault."

"The crop report shows that corn prospects in the Corn Belt are the lowest in several years. In Iowa the indicated yield is down a third from last year. In Ohio and Indiana also prospective yields are below average. In Illinois, Minnesota and Wisconsin, the outlook for yields is about average, and the prospects are better than average in Missouri, South Dakota and Nebraska," he said.

Frost Threat Intensified

Dodd declared that "the chances of frost seriously injuring this year's Iowa corn crop is from five to ten times as great as in an average season. That's a startling statement," he added.

"I am personally more concerned about the chances of losing a lot of our corn because of high moisture content than I am about an excessively short crop.

"A considerable portion of the late planting was done with short season hybrids and corn planted late naturally tends to mature

Nomination Of Perlman Is Approved

Senate Committee Backs Baltimore Man As Solicitor General

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

By a vote of 10 to 1, the Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday approved the nomination of Philip B. Perlman, Baltimore attorney, to be Solicitor General.

The only dissenting vote was cast by Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), chairman of a subcommittee which had the nomination under consideration since January 31.

The two other members of the subcommittee, Senators Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.) and J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) reported in favor of the nominee.

Ferguson Lone Dissenter

Chairman Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.) said the full committee gave Ferguson until Thursday to write his minority report opposing the nomination.

The Senator will act on confirmation soon after the report has been filed.

Perlman was named to succeed McGrath, who resigned last October 7. Since that date, the important No. 2 post at the Justice Department has gone unfilled. The Supreme Court has thus been without its chief law officer.

The committee held 15 hearings over a period of two months into the qualifications of the 57-year-old Baltimore Democrat.

Perlman had the unanimous indorsement of the entire Maryland delegation, including two Republicans in the House.

Delay Criticized

McGrath and Senator Millard Tydings (D., Md.) angrily denounced Ferguson's subcommittee for "delay' and for "unfair questioning" of Perlman.

McGrath yesterday praised both Wiley and Donnell for their unbiased treatment of the nominee.

Ferguson maintained that Perlman had been chiefly "a political lawyer."

In the course of the lengthy hearings which ran to several night sessions, Perlman was required to produce all his income tax records for the past 10 years and the full record of all his income and expenditures.

McGrath charged at the time that the conduct of the hearings was a "disgrace to the Senate" and that the inquiry into Perlman's private law practice violated his constitutional rights.

Crippled Girl, 12, Goes to Lourdes, Walks on Return

Pittsburgh, July 21 (U.P.).—Tears of happiness danced in the eyes of Daniel O'Leary today as he clasped his daughter, 12-year-old Sally Ann. "It's miraculous," he murmured.

Sally Ann, a cripple since birth, had just stepped off an airliner unassisted. She was one of 20 persons who had completed the first air pilgrimage in history to the shrine of Our Lady of Lourdes in France.

Sally Ann, who has had nine spinal operations since birth, had been able to walk only one or two steps at a time in the past.

The girl said she walked as soon as she emerged from the water at Lourdes.

Pilgrims said she walked at least one mile unaided after her bath in the Lourdes waters.

No ticket of admission is needed. Movies start promptly at 8 p. m. —but come early for a good seat!

Gasoline Tanks Explode

Flames Kill 2, Ruin Business Places in North Dakota Town

Minot, N. Dak., July 21 (A.P.).—Two persons were fatally burned, five others seriously burned, and at least nine business establishments destroyed in a spectacular fire here today.

Firemen, battling the blaze since a gasoline bulk station explosion touched it off shortly before noon, said tonight they could keep it confined to the area it has gutted unless a south wind springs up.

Dead are: Chester Westom, 32, Minot and William Foster, Minot.

Westom was a shipping clerk in a creamery located across the street from the bulk station where the fire originated. Foster was a pedestrian in the vicinity.

Two oil stations with their tanks, three creameries, a grocery store, a cafe, a grain elevator, and an equipment company were destroyed.

Fire Under Control

Pendleton, Ore., July 21 (A.P.).—A $500,000 fire which roared through a flour mill today and threatened to engulf the nearby business district was brought under control less than two hours after the first explosion.

The blaze broke out in the big Western Milling Co. flour plant at noon, destroyed the $125,000 plant and set fire to several nearby buildings, including the courthouse.

A grass blaze—possibly caused by sparks from the mill, possibly started separately—raced simultaneously through a residential district and set fire to several houses but these were extinguished with out-of-town aid.

Anti-Poll-Tax Bill Passed By House

Taft Promises Missouri Probe, Adjournment of Congress Saturday

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Congress, in a going-away mood, yesterday started clearing dockets for a Saturday adjournment, but a session-end Senate tangle left the outcome in doubt.

The House for the fourth time in five years passed the antipoll tax bill over Southern opposition by a vote of 290 to 112.

House leaders said they could meet the July 26 adjournment target with ease. The lagging Senate meanwhile went on a day-to-day program basis as the Senate Republican Policy Committee wrestled with this problem:

How to get an investigation of Attorney General Tom Clark's handling of Kansas City vote fraud charges without tieing up Senate business indefinitely.

When the Policy Committee adjourned, Senate GOP Steersman Robert A. Taft (Ohio) made two announcements.

He said Congress will adjourn Saturday and "there will be an investigation of Kansas City vote frauds."

He did not say how Republicans will get authority for the investigation, strepuously opposed by Senate Democrats, or who will make it.

Two Possible Alternatives

It was indicated, however, that a Republican policy subcommittee headed by Taft is exploring at least two possible alternatives to the Kem resolution which has bogged down in the Senate:

1. A House instead of a Senate investigation, possibly initiated by the House Judiciary Committee.

2. An investigation by a regular Senate committee without specific Senate authorization.

Republican leaders made plain they had not abandoned the Kem resolution itself, although they moved yesterday to place it temporarily with other programmed business dammed up behind it.

Calling off plans for a night session, they moved to call up President Truman's Reorganization Plan No. 3, merging nearly all Government housing agencies functions, when the Senate meets at noon today.

It was pointed out that the housing reorganization has privileged status, and Senate Democrats, seeking to avert the Kansas City probe, might have called it up themselves as a filibuster weapon.

The Senate calendar, chock-a-block with unpassed bills awaiting action, will be called up after the vote on Plan No. 3. This will probably mean a night session tonight.

Voted Down By House

The President's housing agency merger will become law automatically unles sboth Houses of Congress disapprove. The House already has voted to stop it. The Senate Banking Committee, however, recommended the plan become law and there is a good chance the Senate will clear it. Senator Taft will join Democratic leaders in supporting the merger

In other developments yesterday:

1. A Senate Appropriations subcommittee not only approved the 400 million dollars budgeted for Greek-Turkish aid but voted for the full 725 million dollars recommended by the President to pay American occupation costs abroad for 15 months. The House cut the latter item to 550 million dollars by appropriating on a 12-month basis. The Senate group approved the Conference Deadlocked On Rent Bill

Amendment Dispute Threatens to Send District Into 1948 Without Controls

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A capitol conference deadlock yesterday threatened to send the District into 1948 with no rent control.

The joint conference group met in closed session at the Capitol for two hours. Members came out shaking their heads in doubt on the question whether the District would get a three-month extension of control.

There's no argument over the extension itself. Both Houses have voted for it.

The deadlock centers around an amendment adopted by the Senate at the insistence of Senator John H. Overton (D., La.) to protect subtenants against eviction when an original tenant surrenders his lease.

Senators Back Plan

In line with the Senate action, Senate members of the conference group were backing the Overton plan.

House members of the group took a determined stand against it. They agreed, however, to go into their own huddle today. Two roads were open, members said—one to go back into the joint conference to look for a compromise, and the other to present the Overton plan to the whole House for a decision.

Senate District Chairman C. Douglass Buck (R., Del.) a member of the conference group, was asked whether it looked like Washington would get a rent control extension.

"I don't know," said Senator Buck. "I hope so The District's rent control certainly ought to last as long as the national rent control program."

Would Carry Through March

National rent control has been extended through the end of next February. The proposed District extension would carry the law through the end of next March, to give Congress more time for reviewing Washington's housing and rent situation next year. The present District rent control law, separate from the national law, goes off the books December 31, this year.

Representative John J. Allen, jr., (R., Calif.) of the House conferees, said the issue of Overton's plan would be taken up with Representative Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn.) and other House conferees today.

Representative Allen said the House group was inclined to insist on a simple extension of the present rent control law without amendments.

"We have not had an opportunity to consider what offsetting amendments should be given to protect the landlords," Allen said.

Issue Is Stated

Representative G. Abernethy (D., Miss.) original author of the rent control extension bill, and a member of the conference group, declared:

"If the Senate stands firm for the Overton amendment, so far as I am concerned rent control in the District will die on December 31."

Senator Overton said: "I'm going to insist on my amendment."

Overton said that if the deadlock is not broken "loss of the three-month rent control extension will be the fault of the House."

Conferees present yesterday were Senators Buck and J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.), Representatives Allen, Abernethy and Gregory McMahon (R., N. Y.).

Mayor Undisturbed

State, Local Officials Dispute Ocean City Gambling Charges

Ocean City, Md., July 21 (A.P.).—State officials disclaimed any responsibility, or else declared themselves ready to prosecute violators, while local authorities today denied published reports of widespread gambling at this large seaside resort.

It has been reported that slot machines and other gambling devices were spinning openly on the boardwalk while two night clubs on the highway north of the city conducted dice games and accepted bets on horse races.

(State's Attorney Franklin Upshur of Worcester County told The Washington Post that "for the last 50 years there's been open gambling at Ocean City. I am ready to do something about it as soon as the sheriff brings them in.")

State enforcement and prosecution officials said any action was up to Ocean City authorities.

Mayor Daniel Trimper declared "no violation of the gambling laws of any serious importance has been brought to my attention."

He described conditions on the boardwalk better than in recent years. He added he didn't anticipate any antigambling crusade.

Sheriff Arthur W. Duer promised to look into the matter and to correct any wrong conditions as quickly as possible. He added he expected cooperation of the Ocean City police.

Attorney General Hall Hammond's office in Baltimore commented, "We couldn't do anything if we wanted to. It's the State attorney's responsibility."

State's Attorney Upshur replied he was ready to continue to prosecute any law violators brought to his attention.

Upshur said some slot machines were confiscated at a boardwalk establishment "about a week or 10 days ago," and that the case had not as yet been brought to trial.

Col. Beverly Ober, State police superintendent, said he could act only if ordered by the Governor or if requested by the Ocean City mayor or police chief. "We are not acting in any way," he added.

Sheriff Duer said he last made a check of the Ocean City boardwalk last week. He said he found nothing amiss except to warn the operators of a few wheels that they could not play for money.

Referring to the two large night clubs mentioned in reports, Mayor Trimer said "the jurisdiction of the mayor and city council of Ocean City extends only to the city limits and what goes on up at the beach is beyond our control."

The Worcester County delegation successfully sponsored a bill legalizing slot machines at the 1947 Maryland General Assembly, but it was vetoed by Governor Lane.

Dutch Forces Attack On Java and Sumatra; Planes Blast Airfields

World Recovery Involved

Rich Resources Threatened By 'Scorched Earth' Policy

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

The fighting in Indonesia may endanger rich resources of oil, rubber and other raw materials desperately needed for the revival of Europe and Asia, it was feared in official Washington yesterday.

If the Indonesians carry out their reported threats of a "scorched earth" policy, officials here believe the fighting may have serious consequences.

The present "police action," as the Dutch describe it, is almost sure to be exploited by Soviet propaganda, to the discredit not only of the Netherlands, but of all the Western powers. There have been reports India would raise the Indonesian issue at the coming Assembly of the United Nations in September.

A formal statement from the State Department indicated yesterday the Dutch government had brushed aside repeated United States appeals against the use of force.

The statement said:

"The United States profoundly regrets that negotiation has been discarded as a means of achieving the voluntary association between the Netherlands and the Indonesian people."

Informed opinion here fears a long and bitter guerilla war in which the Dutch are believed to be far weaker than their opponents.

Lend-Lease Planes Used

The Dutch in Indonesia are believed to have about 150 American lend-lease planes left in the islands on VJ-Day.

Since VJ-Day the United States has furnished no war material except for equipping the brigade of 2500 Dutch marines which trained at Quantico during the war.

A State Department spokesman said yesterday the United States was concerned over the safety of American citizens in Indonesia. He said this Government was in full accord with Britain's efforts at mediation.

Netherlands Wages Full Colonial War, Indonesians Say; Capital Blacked Out

Batavia, Java (Tuesday), July 22 (A.P.).—Dutch ground forces struck against the Indonesian army and guerilla forces at several undisclosed points on Java and Sumatra today as the second day of Dutch "police" action opened under weather conditions ideal for aircraft and armored units.

Dutch military planes, singly and in pairs, began flying from Batavia toward the forward areas shortly after dawn.

Yesterday, Netherlands planes blasted Indonesian airfields on Java and Sumatra, but a tropical deluge of rain hampered ground and armored activities and, to an extent, air operations.

Widespread Attacks Reported

The Netherlands army command continued to withhold official information as to where contact between the opposing forces was established, but Indonesian Republic reports indicated the Dutch were attacking in the Bandoeng, Buitenzorg, Semarang and Soerabaja areas of Java.

A semi-official Dutch dispatch from Bandoeng said five Dutch soldiers were killed and 10 wounded by Indonesian booby traps early Monday.

The Dutch, claiming their military forces were taking "police action" against the republic, urged Indonesians to lay down their arms.

Republican officials accused the Dutch of starting a full-scale "Colonial war." Indonesian troops were ordered to "counterattack" wherever they were attacked.

Jogjakarta, the Indonesian capital, situated near the center of rich Java, was blacked out following a raid on its airport by four Dutch planes.

Heavy Fighting Reported

The Republican Ministry of Information at Jogjakarta said 80 Dutch soldiers had landed from the sea at Ketapank, just north of Banjoewangi, the principal rice harbor on the east Java coast. Banjoewangi is more than 500 miles from the western tip of Java.

Dutch pamphlets dropped over republican territory said the Netherlands army was advancing to guarantee terms of the Cheribon agreement, under which the independence of the United States of Indonesia was to become effective January 1, 1949.

Dutch officials said there would be no censorship of political news,

Bohlen Named For State Post Quit by Cohen

Nominee Regarded As Clear-Sighted Expert on Russia

Charles E. Bohlen, 42-year-old foreign service officer who sat at President Roosevelt's side at Tehran and Yalta, was nominated by President Truman yesterday to be counselor of the State Department.

He will succeed Benjamin V. Cohen, who resigned after 14 years of almost continuous Government service. The change will become effective July 31.

Bohlen will have the rank of an assistant secretary, with the duty of advising and assisting Secretary Marshall in "the consideration and solution of major problems of foreign relations."

Bohlen Speaks Russian

One of the youngest men ever named as counselor of the Department, Bohlen has had wide and almost unique experience in the foreign service through his knowledge of the Russian language. He was President Roosevelt's interpreter at the wartime Big Three meetings, President Truman's at Potsdam and Secretary Marshall's at the recent Moscow conference.

As special assistant to Secretary Marshall in recent months he has played an increasingly important part in developing proposals for the reconstruction of Europe.

Cohen Anxious to Resign

If it had not been for his new appointment he would have had to leave for a foreign assignment in January, under the act of Congress limiting foreign service officers to no more than four years' consecutive service in the United States. The law exempts those appointed to posts requiring Senate confirmation.

Cohen, one of President Roosevelt's original "brain trust," has been anxious to leave the Government ever since the resignation of his friend James F. Byrnes last January. He agreed at Secretary Marshall's urgent request to stay until the Moscow conference.

With Bohlen's nomination, President Truman also sent to the Senate the nomination of John Carter Vincent, now director of the State Department's Office of Far Eastern Affairs, to be Minister to Switzerland.

Wallace Held Presidential Hope of Reds

Communists Have 5 Million Backers, House Group Told

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

Henry Wallace yesterday was called the presidential hope of a third party backed by the Communists.

Walter S. Steele—who has practically made a life work of attacking Communists—told the House Unamerican Committee that his old enemies hope to forge their five million suporters into a major political bloc.

100,000 real Communists, who belong to the party;

100,000 more, who want to get into the party.

4,800,000 people who belong to organizations that Steele claims are just Communist fronts.

Says Reds Are Busy

Steele spent all day telling the Congressmen that the Communists are busy day and night trying to slip into all levels of American life. He said they were setting up schools, making records, promoting radio programs, printing books, getting out papers and building up other propaganda methods. He said Communists, or people who belong to groups that he claims are Communist fronts, are worming their way into colleges, schools, the armed forces and into public life.

Steele is editor of the National Republic magazine. He said he wanted to make it plain that his magazine has nothing to do with The New Republic of which Wallace is editor. On the witness stand yesterday, Steele said he was speaking as chairman of the national security committee of the American Coalition of Patriotic Civic and Fraternal Societies.

On Job Since 1924

He added that he had held his job since 1924. He listed some of the societies in the coalition. They ranged from the well known Daughters of the American Revolution to the Tax Evils Committee of Council Bluffs, Iowa.

The committee members listened solemnly to Steele. When he slowed up, Chairman J. Parnell

Psychiatrist Curran Accepts University of Virginia Post

Dr. Frank J. Curran, who resigned as chief psychiatrist of St. Vincent's Hospital in New York in a disagreement with Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen on the relationship of religion and psychoanalysis, has been named head of a newly organized Child Guidance Clinic at the University of Virginia.

An official at the University's School of Medicine in Charlottesville, Va., said Dr. Curran has been named associate professor of child psychiatry. He is now making a tour of child guidance clinics in several States preliminary to assuming his new duties on September 1, the official said.

Dr. Curran, who resigned from other important positions in the Archdiocese of New York, was said to have accepted the position "a few weeks ago."

Dr. Curran, a Catholic, explained in his letter of resignation that he was leaving his positions because the Catholic hierarchy in New York had failed to clarify or repudiate an attack reported to have been made by the Right Rev. Sheen, professor of philosophy at Catholic University.

On Sunday Msgr. Sheen said he had not condemned all psychiatry as irreligious in his Lenton sermon at St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York, but had referred only to Freudian psychoanalysis as "materialism, hedonism, infantilism and eroticism."

In Minneapolis early this month the entire membership of the Group for the Advancement of Psychiatry approved a statement that "the methods of psychiatry aim to help patients' health in

Felonies Reported Show 50% Increase

Week's Total Well Over Month Ago; Robberies Up 300%

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

Metropolitan police reported nearly 50 per cent more felonies during the last week than they did four weeks ago.

The week turned up four times as many robberies as four weeks ago.

The figures do not disclose a new crime wave in the city. Rather, they are an outgrowth of fuller reporting of crimes prompted by The Washington Post expose of the practice of "holding" crime complaints on precinct books and in the detective bureau.

Only one crime report remained in the "held" category at the end of the week, contrasting with the situation during July 1, 1946 to June 1, 1947, when 600 robbery complaints were "held" and 761 acknowledged.

Gives Accurate Picture

Complete reporting enables the entire police department to swing into action when citizens report the commission of crimes. It also gives a more accurate picture of the efficiency of the police department.

The practice of "holding" cases was ordered ended by Chief of Detectives Floyd A. Truscott in the wake of The Washington Post expose, but Major Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, superseded Truscott's order and gave official sanction to the practice of "pocketing" complaints he has defended the prictice vigorously since.

However, a weekly check of police precinct reports since the June 29 expose reveals only infrequent use of the "hold" device, which worked to keep the bulk of the police department and the public in the dark about many crimes committed in the city.

A survey made yesterday showed that 21 robberies were reported last week by precincts to police headquarters. During the week of June 16 to 22, there were only five.

Robbery Reports Jump

In the week of June 23 to 29 there were only nine robberies. On June 29, The Washington Post articles exposing the practice of hiding the complaints began, and that week robberies reported leaped to 43.

All felonies climbed in as spectacular a fashion. Last week there were 149 reported. A month ago there were 102. Three weeks ago, there were 104. And during the week after the expose they climbed to 191.

The FBI in its annual crime reports show that robbers and other criminals usually are more lethargic during the heat of summer, although sex crimes and assaults are apt to increase.

As the Senate made ready to act on a resolution for a full probe of Washington police today, it was reported that Barrett had sent a detective to other cities to find how they handled crime statistics.

Has Uniform System

The FBI has set up a uniform crime reporting system for all large police departments, but there was no indication that Barrett had asked the Federal agency for advice. Barrett would not comment on the detective's mission.

Reporters checked the police teletype reports and precinct records for the last week. They found that one crime complaint was still being held, apparently to check the authenticity of the report.

One was found to be a false complaint.

One man who complained he had been robbed later asked that the complaint be dropped. The complaints of two other persons were held more than 24 hours for a check-up before they were reported to the police central bureau.

FBI Uniform Crime Reporting Instructions provide that all complaints are to be reported immediately. Those found false are to be shown as closed cases later.

The Republican Police committee decided late yesterday that the calendar that lists the resolution for a proble of police would be taken up today.

The resolution, already approved by the Senate Rules committe, provides for the expenditure of $25,000 for investigators for a "full and complete" examination of law enforcement and administrations of all police forces in Washington. It was introduced by Senators J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.), Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.) and John S. Cooper (R., Ky.) as the result of The Washington Post's investigation.

Request Studied

Va. Hospital Service Asks 25% Boost

Richmond, Va., July 21 (AP).—The State Corporation Commission took under advisement today a request from the Virginia Hospital Service Association that it be allowed to boost rates 25 per cent.

The Hospital Service Association has asked the SCC for authority to up its rate on a single contract from 85 cents to $1 per month; on a husband and wife contract from $1.50 to $2 and on a family contract from $2 to $2.50.

In addition the VHSA asked permission to raise the maximum number of days of hospital care after the first year from 35 for each separate illness to 60 and to extend the "half-cost" period after this from 120 to 180 days.

During the hearing in the SCC courtroom Commissioner L. McCarthy Downs ordered the VHSA to produce year by year statements of the association's reserves for the past five years.

His order was issued after association counsel told the SCC that during the first six months of this year the VHSA had incurred a deficit of $67,676. To this statement, Judge Downs declared that the deficit actually resulted only in a reduction in reserves." Total present reserves were set at $410,000.

3 Swimmers Dead, Another Missing in Md.

By The Associated Press

Three persons were dead in Maryland yesterday as the result of weekend swimming accidents and a fourth was missing.

Police said Thomas J. Leach, 36, Lewiston, Pa., was fatally injured Sunday when he dived from a raft into 3 feet of water at Bay Shore. He was pronounced dead of a broken neck several hours later.

Robert Reynolds, 7, of Essex, Md., drowned when he fell overboard from a boat half a mile off Sparrows Point Sunday night, police said.

George Wells, jr., 18, of Upper Marlboro, drowned in the pool at Chesapeake Beach Park in Calvert County. Jean Phillips saw Wells disappear in the water and notified lifeguard John Moose who recovered the body.

A respirator from the North Beach fire department was used in a futile effort to revive the youth. Dr. George Weems pronounced him dead and County Medical Examiner Dr. Hugh Ward issued a certificate of death by drowning.

State Trooper Walter Wahl was directing a search for Jack Dalrymple, jr., 16, who apparently fell from a fishing boat and disappeared in Chesapeake Bay near the Choptank River channel. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Dalrymple of Kenwood Beach, Calvert County.

U. S. to Absorb British Debt, Says Brazilian

Rio de Janeiro, July 21 (AP).—Evaldo Simas Pereira, economic and diplomatic editor of the Rio de Janeiro morning newspaper Jornal, said today he would predict in his column tomorrow that the United States would absorb Britain's huge debt to Brazil.

John Snyder, United States Secretary of the Treasury who will arrive tomorrow, will discuss the possibility, Pereira said.

President Truman, he added, will visit Brazil aboard the battleship Missouri before the end of 1947.

Salisbury, N. C., July 21 (AP).—The Salisbury Post said in a special dispatch from Washington today that Kenneth Royall, confirmed as Secretary of War, likely would seek the Democratic nomination next yera for governor of North Carolina.

The authority for the story was given as "unnamed responsible political sources."

Royall is a native of Goldsboro and formerly practiced law in Raleigh.

242 Qualify In Va. to Bid On Road Jobs

Richmond, Va., July 21 (AP).—The State Highway Department reported today that 242 private contractors have qualified to submit bids for a share of the big highway improvement program now under way.

Despite the record number of projects currently let to contract, department officials said bidding has been brisk and competition keen on most jobs and that, generallly, prices have been in line with department estimates.

While the highway commission has been forced to reject a number of bids as too high, these have been "relatively few," department spokesman stated, adding that both the commission and department engineers feel contractors have made every effort to cooperate and to keep prices down.

More than 33 million dollars in road construction work, representing a wartime accumulation of allocations as well as current funds, is now let to contract. Nearly one fourth of the 242 qualified contractors have been awarded one or more projects on the basis of low bids.

U. S. Transfers War Hospital To Va. Friday

Waynesboro, Va., July 21 (AP).—Woodrow Wilson General Hospital will be formally transferred from the War Assets Administration to the State of Virginia and Augusta County Friday at 11 a. m. in a ceremony to be held in the office of Governor Tuck.

The actual turning over of the deed to the six million dollar property culminates nearly two years of work and study by the members of the Woodrow Wilson General Hospital Study Commission, officials of the State Department of Health and the State Department of Education and officials of the Augusta County School Board.

Announcement of the formal transfer of the property was made today by State Senator J. C. Carpenter, jr., of Clifton Forge, chairman of the special study commission on hospitals and also the author of a resolution introduced in the 1946 general assembly which set up the commission.

Gen. A. A. Vandegrift, United States Marine Corps commander, is scheduled to address the convention on Monday, August 11, with Mayor Horace Edwards of Richmond delivering the welcoming address.

Hercules Powder Earns $2.69 a Common Share

Wilmington, Del., July 21 (AP).—Hercules Powder Co. today reported net earnings for the first six months of this year of $7,312,900, equal to $2.69 a common share compared to $3,629,885, or $1.30 a share for a like period in 1946.

Sales for the six months period were $69,067,028, compared with $47,050,408 for the corresponding 1946 period.

More German Imports Aim Of Harriman

The Commerce Department is going to aid in selling German goods in this country, Secretary Averill Harriman said yesterday.

To carry out his program, Harriman is sending a Commerce representative to work with American authorities in Germany. Lists of goods available for export to the United States will be furnished prospective purchasers in this country, he said.

Harriman further asserted that Secretary of State Marshall's plan for European rehabilitation would require "prompt action" by Congress at its January session. He declined to comment on the need for a special session to consider the program.

Coal, Food Biggest Needs

Harriman's statements were made at a press conference in a report on his recent visit to Germany with Secretary of Agriculture Anderson.

The great needs in the British-American occupied zones in Germany now, he said, are coal and food.

However, he asserted, more coal cannot be mined without more food for the miners, and more food cannt be raised until fertilizers and farm equipment are provided German farmers, and coal is necessary to provide both.

The great Ruhr area is now producing only half its prewar fuel, he said. At the same time, there are eight million more persons in the British-American zones than before the war. Even then those areas were food-deficit states, he said.

Aim Is Export Stimulation

"The original concept was a unified Germany," he said. "That would give western Germany the benefit of the agricultural production in eastern Germany.

"The objective of this department is to stimulate exports from Germany to balance payments for food we are shipping there."

Secretary Anderson, he said, had promised 300 million tons of food a month for Germany for the next year, which should soon be reflected in increased coal production.

Schecht Says Harriman Tried to Solve Polish Row

Nurnberg, Germany, July 21 (AP). Hjalmar Schacht said on the witness stand today that W. Averill Harriman, present United States Secretary of Commerce, tried vainly to solve German-Polish business arguments as far back as 1935.

The former reichminister of finance testified for Fredrich Flick, steel tycoon charged with aiding Hitler's war plans.

Schacht is serving an eight-year German-imposed sentence as a high Nazi.

Schacht said discontent between Germany and Poland stemmed from German interests in a part of Silesia ceded to the Poles. Some of the property once had belonged to Flick.

"Finally in 1935," Schacht said, "Averill Harriman—he was acting then as a private banker—made arrangements with Flick to set up a kind of trusteeship over this property with the Stars and Stripes as protector."

The proposal fell through, however, the witness said.

New York, July 21 (AP).—Atlantic Refining Co. and subsidiaries today reported for the first six months of 1947 net profit of $6,295,000, equal to $2.07 a common share, compared with $5,146,000, or $1.75 a common share, for the same 1946 period.

Gen. Groves Denies Atom 'Innuendoes'

By The Associated Press

Maj. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, who directed the Army's development of the atomic bomb, made a heated formal denial yesterday of "innuendoes" that he sought to discredit the job done by the civilian commission which has taken over atomic affairs.

Groves, in an unusual official statement through the War Department, said "erroneous reports have been widely circulted in the last few days concerning my position on atomic energy matters." He said several reports have "insinuated that I have encouraged a campaign to discredit the administration" of the Atomic Energy Commission headed by David E. Lilienthal.

He said Secretary of War Patterson had "expressed the desire that I issue a statement" on the matter and declared:

"All such reports and innuendoes are absolutely untrue."

Did Not Name Source

Groves did not name the source of the "innuendoes," but some columnists have indicated that Groves might be the source of reports of Communists working for the Atomic Energy Commission, of secrets being missing from Oak Ridge, Tenn., etc.

Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Eenergy has denied that secrets were taken from Oak Ridge.

Two former Army sergeants are awaiting grand jury action on charges of unlawfully removing documents from the Los Alamos, N. Mex., atomic bomb plant at a time when the plant was under Army control.

Stands Ready to Help

Groves declared he feels that the War Department "has cooperated whole-heartedly with the Atomic Energy Commission since its appointment and I personally, as well as the organization of which I am a member, stand ready to at any time lend assistance to the members of the Atomic Energy Commission, if such assistance is desired by them."

The statement gave no explanation of the offer of personal assistance but friends of the general said that so far as they know the commission has made no call for his aid since he stepped out of the Army's manhattan atomic project when the commission took over January 1.

Advocated Civilian Control

Groves now is assigned to the armed forces' special weapons project, the "organization" which he said is ready for any commission call. He also is a member of the military liaison committee set up by the atomic energy control law to advise the commission on Army and Navy application of atomic energy.

The general asserted he is a long-time advocate of civilian control of the new power, declaring that before the first atomic bomb was used in the summer of 1945 he told former Secretary of War Stimson and Gen. George C. Marshall, then chief of staff, that he favored legislation which would "remove atomic energy from the control of the War Department."

U. S. Nets Only 1.8 Billions In Sale of Surplus Property

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Government has netted only 1.8 billion dollars from the sale of 18.7 million dollars worth of surplus property sold since the war, War Assets Administrator Maj. Gen. Robert M. Littlejohn reported yesterday.

Total sales amounted to 3.5 billion, of which one billion is still due from purchasers. Operating costs have totalled 700 million.

The worst part of the operation took place, he asserted, before he took over the office a year ago today. In the last year, he said, property costing 13.6 billion has been disposed of for 1.4 billion, plus 500 million used for operating expenditures.

Littlejohn's report was highly critical of surplus property disposal before he took over. It thus was critical of his brother Army officer and predecessor as WAA administrator, Lieut. Gen. Edmund B. Gregory.

Report Immediately Assailed

Immediately after his report became public, it was subjected to a violent attack by the House Small Business Committee. Committee Chairman Walter C. Ploeser (R., Mo.) questioned its "veracity and accuracy."

In outlining the problems he found when he took over WAA, Littlejohn reported:

1. Poor organization in the office of the administrator. The administrator, he said, was "expected to tackle every problem. The 33 regions operated basically as separate empires."

2. "Inventory was inaccurate, in many cases nonexistent. Records in many instances were based upon declarations which were only 20 per cent accurate. Accounting methods were unsound. Basic managerial practices swathed in red tape."

3. No sales programs existed with target dates for accomplishment. WAA was committed completely to site sales and sale by contract. The result was that business quit buying.

4. Operation of veterans program was "bogged down." Certificates were being issued against nonexistent supplies. Veterans were "infuriated by inaction and brush-offs."

5. WAA was lax on disposal of "idle facilities sorely needed by private industry."

By June 30 a year ago, he said, only 15 per cent of the 34-billion-dollar disposal job had been complete. It "was 55 per cent complete by June 30, 1947," he added.

Littlejohn denied rumors he intended to resign as the result of differences with Congress, and read a letter from President Truman approving his report.

Congressman Ploeser's statement bristled with charges:

"General Littlejohn states that in the last year, Reconstruction Finance Corporation has purchased over 577 million dollars worth of surplus for small business . . . a check was immediately made with RFC. That agency advised that their total purchases, including real property, were $53,373,613.

"General Littlejohn apparently used cost-to-the-Government figures, which are totally unrelated to sales figures . . . assuming that he used cost figures, this would indicate that WAA had only recovered 10 per cent of the cost-to-the-Government on their total volume of business. But in his report, the General claims that his recovery rate was 29.4 for the year."

Of the $18,700,000,000 worth of property Littlejorn reported disposed of, only $10,500,000,000 worth was sold. Goods, such as airplanes sold for scrap, donations to educational and other institutions, and transfers to other agencies, totaled seven billions. The remaining $1,200,000,000 in property was leased.

Aircraft was an almost total loss, only 2½ per cent of its original value being realized, he said.

No combat airplanes, Littlejohn asserted, have been sold to foreign countries.

Littlejohn refused to comment on congressional criticism.

An additional seven billion dollars' worth of surplus property maye be made available as soon as Congress adjourns, he said.

Eisler's Red Role Told by Witnesses

Former Communist Identifies Him as Leader in Activities

Gerhart Eisler yesterday was identified as a Communist leader who was "dissatisfied" with Communist organizational work in Cleveland industrial plants in 1933.

The 50-year-old, German-born reputed Communist agent is on trial in District Court on a charge of passport fraud.

Joseph Zack Kornfeder, 50, a Detroit salesman and former member of the central committee of the Communist Party in the United States, identified Eisler as the man known to him as "Edwards" in Cleveland.

Kornfeder said "Edwards" expressed dissatisfaction with Kornfeder's organizational work in the Fisher Body plant, White Truck Co. and Republic Steel.

Another witness, Manning Johnson, told the court he had received commendations from Eisler, Earl Browder and two Canadian Communists "for smuggling documents across the Canadian border."

Assistant United States Attorney William Hitz told Justice James W. Morris the Government will not complete its case against Eisler before late Wednesday.

The jury yesterday saw copies of photos from tourist files of the Soviet travel agency, World Tours, Inc., which, Hitz contended, are likeneses of Eisler. Photostats of the agency's records were entered as evidence.

Hitz said the move was an effort to show that Eisler traveled to Europe in the 1930s under the name "Samuel Liptzen" and that the Communist Party paid his expeneses.

Samuel Liptzin, 55, a shipping clerk for a New York newspaper who identified himself as an immigrant from White Russia and a party member since 1921, told the court he had not left the country since his naturalization in 1917. He testified his papers were stolen in 1934.

Man-Made
Earthquakes May Be Next War Weapon

By The Associated Press

The Army Air Forces set off speculation on the possibility of man-made earthquakes as a war weapon yesterday. It coupled an announcement of deep-penetration bombing tests with mention of a connection with atomic warfare.

The announcement concerned principally the arrival of three B-29s at Giebelstadt, Germany, for experiments with the biggest post-war standard-explosive bombs—the 25,000-pound "Samson" and "Amazon." They will be used on the heavily protected submarine assembly factory at Garge, Germany.

The AAF closed its statement thus:

"With the introduction of atomic warfare in World War II, it is logical that the need for these specialized types of bombs may be even greater in future defense."

British Effort Successful

One possibility suggested was that the language might refer to development of measures against installations put underground as protection against atomic bombs.

Some atomic scientists, however, are understood to go further in speculation. They are reported to want a test of the theory that shock waves set off by an underground atomic blast would act like an earthquake and destroy structures much farther away than a bomb above ground would affect.

The power of nonatomic explosives smashing their way deep into the earth before detonation was demonstrated by the British late in World War II. Deep penetration bombs set off shock waves that smashed a tunnel 135 feet below the surface, far below the point of the blast.

May Test 42,000-Pounder

The purpose of the coming tests is to see how far the 25,000-pound bombs will drive into reinforced concrete structures.

Along with announcement of the "Samson" and "Amazon" tests, the AAF disclosed that it is developing and probably will test a 42,000-pounder in the next few months.

That reportedly is the heaviest standard explosive weapon ever developed, but the AAF recently had an even bigger superbomb—a 100,000-pounder—in the blueprint stage. Designers said, however, that the project had been shelved in a curtailment of research.

90,000 Jews Placed Under House Arrest

By Homer Bigart

Jerusalem, July 21.—The British mandate government, concerned about reaction from the Jewish community to its decision to return 4500 immigrants to France, clapped a dusk-to-dawn house arrest on 90,000 Jerusalem Jews tonight.

Haifa's Jewish quarters also remained under curfew after an attack by Haganah, Jewish force, early this morning on two naval radar stations on Mount Carmel.

Despite the curfew, terrorism continues. The Iraq Petroleum Co. pipeline was blown up east of Haifa. Early this evening two British soldiers and a civilian were injured when their jeep was blown up by a mine in the heart of Haifa.

When rumors of the government's decision to ship refugees back to France were substantiated tonight by news dispatches from London, the Jewish agency condemned this "brutal undertaking which reveals the confusion and desperation of British policy.

Chief Secretary Sir Henry Gurney tonight charged the Jewish Agency with "casting wholly unjustified aspersions on the conduct of personnel of his majesty's navy" and said the responsibility for the fighting aboard the refugee ship European Exodus, in which two Jewish immigrants and an American seaman were killed, rested with those who resisted the navy.

If France insists on transshipment of the refugees to South America, the episode will contain an element of diabolical humor. All 4500 refugees on the Exodus were provided with visas for Colombia.

If Britain succeeds in her plan to return all future "illegals" to their ports of origin, a very severe blow will be dealt to official Zionism as the Jewish Agency has made immigration its main reason for existence.

Post Carrier Boy, 14, Saves Girl From Drowning

A 14-year-old Washington Post carrier, who learned about first aid in the Boy Scouts, saved a 2-year-old girl from drowning in a fish pond in the yard of her Arlington home yesterday.

Hero of the rescue was Ashton (Buster) Duffey, 2516 N. Custis rd. The baby he saved was Nicole (Nicky) Brinker, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Walter E. Brinker, his next door neighbors.

Nicky, unconscious when she was pulled from the pond, was revived by artificial respiration administered by Buster, his younger brother, Lloyd, 11, and Col. Brinker.

Buster, attracted by a loud splash from the fish pond and the screams of Nicky's 4-year-old brother Walter, said he found the little girl completely submerged in the 18-inch-deep pond.

He pulled her from the water and started artificial respiration. Then, when she began to breathe, Buster told Lloyd how to continue the respiration and ran to the Brinker home for help.

Colonel Brinker said his daughter was still unconscious when he arrived seconds later, with Lloyd still working over her prostrate body. He said he took over, and after "only a few pushes" she began crying.

An hour after her rescue, Nicky seemed none the worse for her experience.

Colonel Brinker, wso is assigned to Army Ground Forces Headquarters at the Pentagon, has lived in the Arlington home only about 10 days. He and his family returned to this country about two months ago from Germany, where he had been on occupation duty for about a year.

He said the fish pond, which has been a source of worry ever since he moved into the house, will be filled in and converted into a sandpile "so the kids will have a safe place to play."

Proposed Visit Of Eva Peron To Britain Off

London, July 21.—The proposed visit to Britain of Eva Peron, wife of the President of Argentina, was canceled today to the professed mystification of the British Foreign Office.

Exchange Telegraph reported as follows:

"Several inquiries, in official and unofficial sources in London today, do not reveal any 'regrets' in the wording of the Argentine government's official 'no,' which was announced at the Foreign Office earlier today, or in any acknowledgment of the Argentine government's communication, which may have been made in Buenos Aires or London."

Russian Denies Effort to Bar Korea Groups

Seoul, Korea, July 21 (AP).—Col. Gen. Tirenty Shtikov denied at a news conference today an American assertion that the Russians were attempting to use the veto to prevent consultation with some Korean groups in the current conferences on establishment of a provisional Korean government.

The veto allegation previously had been made by Maj. Gen. Albert E. Brown, chief American delegate on the joint U. S.-Soviet Commission.

Shtikov, chief Russian delegate, was asked about it by American correspondents at his first joint news conference for Americans and Koreans. He replied, "There is no question of the veto."

Asked if the United Nations might be able to solve the apparent deadlock over interpretation of the Moscow agreement of 1945 on forming a Korean government, Shtikov said, "There does not exist such a stalemate which may not be broken."

Shtikov read a long prepared statement alleging that the American commissioners were taking an attitude contrary to the Moscow decision and the recent Marshall-Molotov agreement to consult democratic Korean political parties and social organizations in deciding on a government.

The Americans, he said, wished to consult "indiscriminately" with commercial and industrial companies, institutions of learning and other "non-social" organizations and "even fictitious organizations."

He said the Americans had rejected a Soviet proposal to begin consultations with groups to which neither side objected and which had memberships of more than 10,000 each.

Czechs (adv.) Lift Iron Curtain and Bid Tourist Enter

Copyright 1947 New York Tribune, Inc.

Paris, July 21.—The Czech government has lifted the iron curtain in a two-column advertisement that will appear in tomorrow's European edition of the New York Herald Tribune.

Under the heading, "Health and the Iron Curtain," the advertisement pictures a smiling tourist single-handedly lifting the iron curtain and assures travelers "Czechoslovakia can give you the quiet and peace you need for your holiday."

"Everybody can confirm that there is no such thing as an iron curtain screening off Czechoslovakia," says the Czech copywriter.

"You can buy your American or English newspaper every day in the streets. At the hotels you will find the prewar standard of comfort and consideration."

Chairman Fred A. Hartley (R., N. J.) of the House Labor Committee was named vice chairman.

The 14-member committee—seven each from the House and Senate Labor Committees—was established by the new labor law to study the causes or labor unrest, the administration of Federal labor laws, industrial productivity, collective bargaining practices and other problems.

House Sends Senate Navy Improvement Bill

House passage sent to the Senate yesterday legislation authorizing the Navy to spend $55,580,000 on improvements to 16 warships during the next four years.

The work will consist principally of fitting the ships with devices developed during and since the war.

The vessels involved are nine destroyers, four submarines, a cargo transport and two landing ships.

U. S. Airport Facilities Transfer Bill Passed

By The Associated Press

Legislation aimed at expediting transfer of a bollion dollars worth of Federal airports and facilities to States, counties and cities without charge was passed by the House yesterday.

The bill returns to the Senate for concurrence on a minor House amendment.

The War Asets Administration has been disposing of surplus air fields but has no authority to transfer such facilities as warehouses, maintenance shops, administration buildings and recreational facilities.

Chances Slim For Harper's Confirmation

President Truman's friend, Roy W. Harper, currently appears to have verv little chance to be confirmed as Federal judge in Missouri at this session of Congress.

Hearings on Harper's nomination began last Ffiday and turned yesterday into an investigation of last year's election in Missouri, where he is Democratic State chairman.

The Democrats ran a get-out-the-vote lottery in several southeastern Missouri counties. Harper told a Senate judiciary subcommittee yesterday that he had nothing to do with the lotteries and that he first heard of them through Republican protests. In the lotteries, anybody who voted—no matter what his party was—had a chance to win the prizes, which mostly were given by local businessmen.

But Senator Donnell (R., Mo.) said he thought the lotteries had a great bearing on Harper's fitness to be a judge and that he meant to make a full investigation. Harper is due for more questioning this afternoon.

Meanwhile, the Judiciary Committee approved the nomination of Representative Leo F. Rayfiel (D., N. Y.) to be a Federal judge in New York.

Some bar grounds backed Rayfiel, but others opposed him on the ground he was not known for ability. A committee statement said this was no reason for refusing to approve the Congressman, since others said he was an honest and able man.

One Europe by NECESSITY

from THE CHICAGO SUN

Having set up a working organization for Western Europe, the Paris economic conference adjourns with the continent openly split down the middle. The Marshall plan is now to be countered with a "Molotov plan" for Eastern Europe. Yet nothing which either the Soviet Union or the United States can do during the next few months will change the basic economic facts of Europe, and those facts are irreconcilable, in the end, with an economically sundered continent.

Europe is an economic unit. Only by the most profound revolution in long-established trade patterns would it cease to be one. While the political rivalry of Russia and America temporarily drives the continent toward division, therefore, economic realities exert constant pressure toward unity. It can still be hoped that ultimately these realities may compel abandonment of the artificial separation, and the emergence of a free and independent Europe which, in its unwillingness to serve as the battlefield of an atomic war, will provide one of the best guarantees against military confl

"Molotov Plan" Empty

The "Molotov plan," we suspect, will turn out to be mostly words. In attempting to organize Eastern Europe economically, the Soviet Union cannot get away from the fact that Poland, Romania, Hungary, Bulgaria, and Yugoslavia are predominantly agricultural nations which have always sent their foodstuffs to Western Europe in exchange for manufactured goods. Russia, in normal times, could send these nations her surplus food; but in normal times they would not need it. Confronted by mountainous reconstruction problems of her own, Russia certainly has neither consumer goods nor capital goods to spare in the quantities which Western Europe could provide.

Czechoslovakia is far more advanced industrially than her neighbors to the east, and could probably come closer than they to working out a permanent arrangement with Russia. But normally 80 per cent of her trade is with Western Europe. Economic necessity impels her toward a revival of that trade rather than exclusive reliance upon a single customer of lower living standards than her own.

Promises versus Performance

Russia can temporarily counter the pressure of these forces by political intimidation, as she has already done, but in the long run she can keep Eastern Europe in line only by offering something better than its historic relations with the West provide. Lacking export capital with which to industrialize her satellites, having no need to buy their food, and lacking surplus manufactures to sell them, she really has little to offer except the promise of a rosy—but dim and distant—future. That is not going to seem very substantial to her impoverished clients.

With American resources in the balance, Western Europe can organize with far greater chance of success than the East. So long as we are willing to make up the dollar deficit by loans or grants, we can ship much of the food that normally comes from the East, and we can ship the industrial goods needed to rebuild industry. But eventually the same necessity which drives the East to trade with the West will drive the West to trade with the East. Though it is hoped that American tariffs will be revised downward, nobody expects that we can or will become Europe's sole market, replacing the natural markets on the continent it

Keep Door Open to Peace

Thus while political and strategic impulses push Europe in one direction, economic realities push it in the other. In view of the urgent need for reconstruction, we have no alternative but to proceed with the Marshall plan. But we should do so in the knowledge that the long-term odds favor the breaking down of any artificial barrier thrown across Europe. We must, therefore, be prepared to merge the Western Europe plan into a truly continental plan whenever Russia and her satellites decide to come in. The door must be left open, as Gov. Stassen urges.

Certainly no advice could be worse than that of a few Middle Western congressmen who want to break off relations with Russia or otherwise drive the wedge deeper. On the contrary, we shall lose the moral leadership we now claim if we can successfully be accused of waging an ideological crusade. Instead of widening the chasm, we should take positive measures of reconciliation. An offer of a reconstruction loan to Russia, for example, would deprive her of the excuse to demand exorbitant reparations, thus opening the way to a settlement of the German problem, without which a final European settlement is impossible.

If we resolutely insist on reconstruction now, if we refuse to impose political conditions on economic aid, if we demonstrate by deeds that we are not building an anti-Soviet bloc, we can hope that our policy combined with economic necessity will drive the Soviet Union ultimately to co-operate in reviving Europe as the economic unit it is.

Depression, Inflation Remain Dangers in U. S., Truman Says

two recommendations. The first was to keep the public thoroughly informed of the true agricultural outlook, to prevent unfounded rumors leading to speculation. The second, in the event the situation should really become serious, is to make advance plans for conserving supplies. This could be done in part by exercising remaining Government controls, and in part by renewing some authority which has expired.

Mr. Truman did not recommend a restoration of rationing or price controls.

2. Wage Advances and Industrial Production.

The President's argument on this subject amounted to a fervent appeal to the steel industry, pattern setters for industrial prices as well as major contributors to industrial costs, not to raise their prices.

The danger which worried Mr. Truman, the report made clear, was that the steel industry would up its prices because of higher coal costs under the new wage contract, effective early this month.

The coal contract, the report said, reflected in part the necessity to jump wages because of the character of the work, and in part to equalize the 15 cents an hour increase pattern in other industries. "There has been an exaggeration of the size of this adjustment," the President said.

He urged the steel companies to "exercise extraordinary caution" and see whether the added coal costs could not be offset by high production and other savings. Favorable earnings should permit the absorbtion of the cost over the short run, he said. In the longer run, as operating efficiency in the mines increases, "we have a right to expect that . . . the price of coal will be reduced to a lower level."

In any event, the President said, the coal contract "does not provide a guide or pattern" for wage increases in other areas.

If steel producers and other industries do not keep prices stable, he declared, they "could offset the progress thus far made and start another wage-price spiral in motion."

(In a statement released yesterday by United States Steel Corporation, its board chairman, Irving S. Olds, went almost, but not quite, all the way with Mr. Truman. He too said that special circumstances in the coal industry made the new contract in no sense a pattern for other industries; that the rest of the wage increases was really only the same "15 cents package" as in other fields, and was in no way inflationary.

(But he declined to say whether or not "Big Steel," the industry's price setter, would keep its prices at their present level.)

The President considered that housing was the Nation's No. 1 domestic economic problem. Construction in the past six months, he reminded Congress, had not come up to expectations. The reason, he stated flatly, was too high prices.

The result, he went on, was unfortunate in two respects: First, the Nation's needs for proper dwellings were not being met. Second, the industry was not providing the high volume of activity needed to sustain maximum employment when the "temporary props" to the present high-level economy begin to decline.

The first recommendation of Mr. Truman in this situation was that "fundamental adjustments must be made in housing costs."

"Nowhere are costs reductions more important to the whole economy than in the case of construction," he said. If they are not forthcoming, he warned, the demand for housing will decline.

In addition, the President again called for passage of the Wagner-Taft-Ellender housing bill, and preplanning by Federal and State governments for construction projects necessary now and in the future.

Net exports over imports, the President wrote, have risen from about five billion dollars on an annual basis in the last part of 1946, to 10 billion dollars in the first half of this year. This has led to some strain and inflationary pressure on our economy, he said, but it has not been serious and part of it is temporary.

But, he warned, the exports must be continued, and some strain will remain, for the foreign-aid program "is directed toward the winning of the peace" and the exports "are at the core of this Nation's foreign policy."

The trouble is, he intimated, foreign countries are encountering increasing difficulty in paying for our products, and must be aided by this country.

The program must go on, Mr. Truman said, even though it will mean fewer goods for home use. But the deprivation will be slight and we shall still have available for our own use more goods and services than ever in history.

In reporting on the present level of economic activity, the President painted what was indeed a record-breaking picture.

Employment in private industry was at 60 million in June, and counting those in the armed services, it was 61,400,000. Unemployment was close to an irreducible minimum for a free economy country. Industrial production for the first six months of 1947 was highe than for any previous peacetime period. Agriculture, except for corn, was at similarly high levels. The gross national income on an annual basis was at the record figure of 225 billion dollars.

The record production of goods was still being taken off the market. But, returning to his basic theme, Mr. Truman warned that consumers' real income had dropped during the first half of 1947 because prices had risen faster than their wages and other receipts.

Consumers were saving less, and using credit more. Therefore, fundamental adjustments must be made of income, prices and production, "before the lack of them produces serious unemployment and business decline," he said. Otherwise, he implied, the adjustment will be made perforce, through recession or depression, which would be "tragic, costly and wasteful."

'Twas Picnic Day For Lovell Family—And What a Day!

York, Nebr., July 21 (AP).—When the Homer Lovell family arrived at the picnic site, they discovered the gasoline tank had sprung a leak and doused their lunch of fried chicken.

At the picnic site, one of the children lost and recovered her purse three times. Another, a boy, fell on his face, scraping it pretty badly.

En route home a tire went flat. While it was being repaired, another deflated. Altogether, there were seven flats.

The harassed family repaired to a farmhouse to await help. While sitting in the front room they were engulfed by plaster from the ceiling.

Iranian Paper Assails Red Firm's Labor Policy

Tehran, Iran, July 21 (U.P.).—The semiofficial newspaper Ettelaat charged today that Russian officials of the Iranian-Russian Caspian Fisheries Co. pursued the worst labor policy in Iran "despite their propaganda maintaining that they are defending the rights of the toilers."

The newspaper said the officials underpaid workers, dismissed them indiscriminately, and violated Iranian labor laws.

Gov. Dewey's 'Gift' Arouses Montanan

Offer of 50,000 New York Communists Resented as Slur, Rep. Mansfield Says

Representative Mike Mansfield (D., Mont.), in a House speech yesterday attacked Gov. Thomas E. Dewey for offering to "give" Montana New York's 50,000 Communists.

"I want Governor Dewey to know that Montana resents his slur against our State, Mansfield told the House. "He would be better off if he had remained in New York attending to his own Communist probelm."

Mansfield said the people of Montana "can take care of our own problems but you, Governor Dewey, are evidently afraid to take care of yours."

"Typical of Attitude"

Associated Press quoted Governor Dewey Sunday as making the offer to Lieut. Gov. Ernest T. Eaton of Montana, in commenting on a remark by Eaton that Montana would welcome settlers from New York and other Northeastern States.

Mansfield said Dewey's comment "is typical of the attitude of the absentee landlords of the East whensver they think of Montana or for that matter any part of the West. Montana is not a second class State and it does not want Governor Dewey's Communists."

Wyoming Isn't "In Bag"

Cody, Wyo., July 21 (U.P.).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey learned today that Wyoming was far from "in the bag" for him.

The New York chief executive formall addressed a nonpartisan American Legion luncheon on another stop of his "vacation" tour, but in the background Republican Senator Edward V Robertson drew most attention.

Robertson told reporters that although Dewey seemed to have the lead among the State's Republican convention delegates, there was "considerable sentiment for Taft because of his courageous work on the Taft-Hartley bill."

Robertson added that there was also Stassen sentiment, especially among the younger Republicans.

The Senator pointed out that Wyoming GOP delegates have not gone against the national trend since 1896, and that a Dewey landslide might find Wyoming in the fold.

"He's becomming very popular in the West," Robertson said, "because he is a likely fellow and a good mixer."

In addition to Robertson, several other Wyoming Republican chiefs conferred with Dewey and his party. Including were Frank Horton, Wyoming National Republican Committeeman; Mrs. Doris Reynolds and William Garlow, head of the veterans committee of the National Federation of Young Republican Clubs.

Man Hangs From Rope Half Hour Until Rescue

New York, July 21 (U.P.).—A 60-year-old porter hung for 30 minutes to a rope five stories above ground today until police, attracted by his screams, spotted him on an inner courtwall and rescued him.

Giuseppe Mazzalle said he was locked in a room early this morning. He spotted a steel rope fastened to the window ledge and decided to lower himself to the fourth floor window.

Too late, he discovered that the cable was too short and he dangled from the end unable to pull himself back to the fifth floor window.

Humble Humhumus Make Aquarium Hum

San Francisco, July 21 (U.P.).—There's a lot of trouble at Seeinhart Aquarium, and it all started with a shipment of Humuhumumimi from Hawaii.

The aquarium actually had ordered the pretty pink-tailed Humuhumuhiukole but got Humuhumumimi instead. The new arrivals are too belligerent to be placed in the same tank as the others. And besides they keep jumping over a barrier into adjoining tanks.

They also are known as "Tigger Fish."

Miami to Levy Tax On Transient Guests

Miami, Fla., July 21 (AP).—An ordinance levying a 5 per cent tax on hotel and apartment bills for transient guests was adopted by the Miami City Commission today by a 4 to 1 vote. Commissioner Leonard K. Thompson cast the lone dissenting vote.

Hotel and apartment owners opposing the ordinance contended that the tax would create ill will toward Miami, would drive visitors to other cities, and would react unfavorably against Florida as a whole.

Mayor Perrine Palmer, jr., declared that tourists enjoy the advantages of Miami's municipal facilities, and pay no direct taxes to the city for the benefits they receive.

Dutch Attack Indonesians On Both Java and Sumatra

and that republican newspapers here would be allowed to publish.

Dutch military sources said torrential downpours slowed their armor and infantry, and the first communique told only of aerial activity.

The communique stated that the planes they used were American types. Squadrons of Mustang fighters (P-51) made the initial attacks, the announcement said, and these were followed by Mitchell reconnaissance bombers (B-25).

President Soekarno of the Republic, in a radio appeal from the Indonesian capital of Jogjakarta, urged the nations of the world to bring the Indonesian question before the United Nations Security Council.

General Soedirman, commander in chief of the Indonesian army, announced over the radio that Dutch infantrymen, supported by planes, launched a heavy attack from the important city of Bandoeng, in western Java, toward the rich rice paddies of the Sundanese.

Airborne Operations Indicated

He declared fighting was under way near Dutch-held Semarang, the most important city in central Java, and that the Dutch were attacking "at random" not only along front lines "but also in the interior"—a possible indication of airborne operations.

The Jogjakarta radio said Indonesian underground elements had arisen within Semarang, and fighting had started at Gunung Pati, 10 miles from that city.

Dutch artillery has gone into action south of Bandoeng, the republican radio declared, and Dutch planes launched a rocket attack on Tasik Malaya in western Java.

Other Dutch ircraft strafed a railway train on the Soerakarta-Sraden line, strafed the east Java coatal town of Banjoewangi, and bombed Madoen, the radio added.

An informant who had just returned to Batavia from Buitenzorg, 30 miles south of here, said the Dutch were encountering stiff opposition and had called in air support to strafe Indonesian positions.

The Dutch, who seized all republican facilities in Batavia yesterday following a breakdown in negotiations for Indonesian independence, asserted the air attacks were necessary to immobilize Indonesian fighter planes.

Indonesians Use Jap Planes

Authoritative sources estimated the Indonesian airforce at about 40 old Japanese planes, many in poor repair. The size of the Dutch army, well equipped with United States surplus and Lend-Lease military goods, has been estimated at from 100,000 to 120,000. The Indonesian forces number about 200,000 regulars.

The Dutch communique said Japanese-type aircraft was set afire and hangars damaged at Kalidjati, and gasoline tanks and workshops destroyed at Parigi airfield near Serang and at Taskimalaya airfield.

Indonesian sources said the Dutch planes had attacked a supply depot at Magelang in central Java; airports at Tjibeureum, Masopati, Panasan, Jogjakarta, Kedoeng and Banteng; and the famed resort center of Malang in eastern Java.

There were some casualties, these sources said, and the Indonesians replied with anti-aircraft fire.

Indonesian Premier Amir Sjarifoeddin, speaking on the Jogjakarta radio, urged Indonesians to stand firm against "the Dutch colonial war."

Dutch Actions Assailed

He asserted that the Dutch never made an effort to return occupied cities to Indonesian control, as pledged in the Cheribon accord. He said the Dutch consistently reinforced troops on the pretext of preserving law and order.

"Should it take the Dutch 130 per cent of the number of troops it took the Japanese?" He asked.

Hubertus J. van Mook, acting Dutch governor general, said in a radio address that the Dutch welcomed the assistance of all Indonesians who "are disgusted with the present situation and who realize its continuation would render impossible the creation of a really free United States of Indonesia."

He said Netherlands troop would have to establish law and order in "certain parts" of both Java and Sumatra.

Van Mook said the republican government made a "last and irreparable" mistake when it rejected Dutch demands last week to withdraw republican forces from front lines, and to accept a Dutch plan for the joint Dutch-Indonesian policing of republican areas.

Pamphlets Warn Indonesians

Dutch pamphlets dropped from airplanes warned Indonesians not to resist.

"Do not leave your villages or your work," the pamphlets said. "Prevent all demolitions or scorched earth tactics. Whoever destroys anything will be punished without fail."

Wallace Is '48 Hope of Reds, Editor Tells House Group

Thomas (R., N. J.), Counsel Robert Stripling and some of the members helped out with questions.

Steele said some of the schools he claims are run by the Communists have been going in for nuclear physics.

For instance, he said Dr. Frank Oppenheimer of the University of Minnesota taught atomics at the California Labor College until three months ago. The college is accredited for GI training, and Steele said this had caused a row.

Dr. Oppenheimer is the brother of Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer—who was a key man in the development of the atomic bomb—and is a noted scientist in his own right. He, too, worked on atomics at Berkeley, Calif.; Oak Ridge, Tenn., and Los Alamos, N. Mex. And on June 12 he issued a statement denying that he had been a member of the Communist Party.

Other Teachers Named

Besides Oppenheimer, Steele said Dr. Lewis Balamuth was teaching "Rudimentary Principles of Atomic Energy" at the Jefferson School of Social Science in New York. Dr. Balamuth worked in the Manhattan Project, which developed the atomic bomb. Also teaching there, Steele added, is Vladimir D. Kazakewski, who belonged to the Army special faculty at Cornell University.

At the Jefferson School, Dr. Howard Selsan told the Associated Press that Dr. Balamuth had been on the faculty but said he did not know Kazakewski.

Steele went on to say that Antioch College, at Yellow Springs, Ohio, is a "legitimate college" but that two of its faculty members are Arthur S. Steinberg and Lewis Corey. Under the name of Berger—Steele claimed—Steinberg is listed among 140 persons "connected" with a spy ring in Canada. And he said Corey's real name in Fraini and he was a Communist Party charter member.

From time to time during the day, Steele would give the committee a list of people he claimed were Communists or members of organizations he claims are Communist fronts.

One was a list of 400 or 500 people he claims are Communist local officers throughout the country.

Steele said that about two months ago he gave the Army a list of 2000 soldiers he claimed are tied up with the Communists or the front groups.

"The most alarming phase of the situation," said Steele, is the manner in which these forces penetrated our armed services and the fact that our Government permits in the United States, the functioning of a reserved armed force whose loyalty is to another power."

Favors Outlawing or Curbing

Steele said he favored the pending bills to outlaw or curb the Communist Party, but he said the States would have to follow through. Already, he said, there are 12 States which keep the Communists off their ballots, but the Communists get ther anyway by the device of calling themselves Independents, or winning regular party nominations.

Former Vice President Wallace, Steele said, is the mouthpiece of the Progressive Citizens of America, which works closely with the Political Action Committee.

Steele told the committee that Wallace's New Republic is 98 per cent foreign-owned and that he would be glad to bring in his records to prove this.

Michael Straight, publisher of the New Republic, told the Associated Press in New York that Steele's charges were old stuff, and have been disproved before.

faster than that planted at the normal time.

"But if we make a larger than expected crop it may increase the amount of soft and wet corn with which we will have to deal. If it is not properly handled that which is left when warm weather ses in next spring will mold and spoil. If that happens, the loss would be about as great as if the corn had not been grown."

Dodd, recognized as the Department's expert on feed grains, spoke favorably of other feed crops, vitally needed if the Nation's meat crop is not to be seriously short next year.

"Prospects are," he said, "for a larger than average oat crop, barley only slightly below average, and a very small sorghum crop, along with our corn crop. Our corn carryover this fall is expected to be about 350 million bushels—twice as much as we carried over into the present crop year. With a 2.6 billion-bushel corn crop our feed grain supply per animal unit for 1947-48 will be as large as the average of the past 10 years though about 12 per cent under last year."

Hay and pastures may be the largest ever, he added, and the outlook for high protein foods is very good. "Oil seed crops such as soybeans, flaxseed and cottonseed promise to be much better than last year," he said.

The official urged his hearers to "help farmers handle their corn so that it will keep well.

"There is no time to lose," he asserted. "To get conferences on this subject held in all the corn belt States and get this information down to the individual farmers will take a great deal of time and hard work.

"The situation promises to be critical and calls for an all-out effort by all parties concerned."

their emotional lives so that they may live in harmony with society and with its standards. We believe that there is no conflict between psychiatry and religion. In the practice of his profession, the competent psychiatrist will therefore always be guided by this belief."

In another statement, four Catholic psychiatrists, including Dr. Curran, declared:

"It is a fundamental tenet of the Catholic Church that there can be no conflict between true science and religion. We wish to state our emphatic agreement with this principle.

"Psychiatry is a recognized medical specialty dedicated to the diagnosis and treatment of the mentally and emotionally sick. It occupies the same position in the field of medicine as does surgery or any other specialty concerned with the relief and care of human suffering."

The signers of the statement were Dr. Edward A. Strecker of Philadelphia, head of the psychiatry department at the University of Pennsylvania; Dr. Francis J. Gerty of Chicago, head of the psychiatry department of the University of Illinois College of Medicine, and Dr. Leo H. Bartemeier of Detroit.

Albania Faces U. N. Blackball

Lake Success, July 21 (AP).—Four great powers, disagreeing sharply with Russia, expressed "grave" doubts today about admitting Soviet-sponsored Albania to the United Nations.

Delegates at a meeting of the membership committee of the United Nations Security Council indicated that the applications of Albania and eight other countries would have rough sledding, with no present assurance that any would be accepted.

Other U. N. developments:

1. In the Economic and Social Council, Soviet Russia successfully defended Hungary against a Cuban attempt to put the present Communist-dominated government of Hungary into the "undemocratic" class in which the U. N. has put Franco Spain. The Council by 10 to 1 vote, with the United States abstaining, approved Hungary's application for membership in the U. N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO).

Cites Corfu Dispute

2. Frederick H. Osborn, United States deputy on the Atomic Energy Commission, said in the commission's Political Committee that an overall plan for quotas for source material, nuclear fuel and dangerous facilities should be written into an atomic control treaty. He thus agreed partly with Soviet Russia on a quota system, but the United States and Russia still do not see eye-to-eye on international or national ownership of atomic facilities and materials.

Hayden Raynor, United States, asked whether Albania intended to comply with the April recommendation by the Security Council that Britain and Albania take their Corfu mine dispute to the International Court of Justice and, if so, when.

Pierre Ordonneau said France's opinion of Albania had been seriously damaged by her attitude in the Corfu case and the attitude of the Albanian delegations before the Security Council.

Brazil, which voted with Russia, Poland, Mexico and France for Albania last August, indorsed the United States questions, as did Belgium. Britain, China and Australia voiced their "doubts" about Albania's "peace-loving character."

Alexei N. Krasilnikov, Russia, defended Albania against what he called "slanders."

Truman Names Delegates to U. N. Assembly

President Truman yesterday named the American delegation to the September session of the United Nations General Assembly, and left off the list members of Congress who served at previous regular sessions.

Mrs. Roosevelt

State Department officials told reporters that Chairman Vandenberg (R., Mich.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Senator Connally (D., Tex.) and others who served at the Assembly's first two sessions had been omitted at their own request.

Secretary of State Marshall is expected to head the delegation to the next session, opening in New York September 16. Mr. Truman sent to the Senate the nominations of these other members:

Delegates—Warren R. Austin, U. S. senior representative on the U. N. Security Council; Mrs. Frankling D. Roosevelt, Hershel V. Johnson, and John Foster Dulles.

Alternates—Charles Fahy, recently State Department legal adviser; Willard Thorp, assistant secretary for economic affairs; Francis B. Sayre, Adlai Stevenson and Dr. Virginia C. Gildersleeve.

Austin was this Government's sole delegate to the April special session of the Assembly, summoned to deal with the Palestine issue, Johnson was the alternate.

Stevenson, former representative on the U. N. Preparatory Commission, was included among the alternates last year, but the others are new.

Sayre, former Ambassador to the Philippines, is currently United States representative on the U. N. Trusteeship Council. Dr. Gildersleeve, a United States alternate at the United Nations San Francisco organization meeting, is dean of Barnard College, New York City.

Johnson, deputy to Mr. Austin on the Security Council, has ambassadorial rank.

Husband Pounds Pillow and Wife, She Complains

William J. Thompson, 26, 2831 Georgia ave. nw., was found guilty yesterday of assaulting his wife when she insisted that he move over to his side of the bed.

The wife, Anna, said that July 15 she left her bed to get a bite to eat out of the icebox. When she returned, Mrs. Thompson told Judge Ellen K. Raedy of Municipal Court, Thompson was lying on her side of the bed reading the newspaper.

Mrs. Thompson told him to move over. He refused, she said, and argued that she was always crowding him out of the bed. When she repeated her request, Mrs. Thompson said, her husband beat her.

Judge Raedy released Thompson on his personal bond and a promise that he would not repeat the offense.

Co-chairmen of the event are Calvin Kidwell and Stanley Hanes. Proceeds will be used for community youth activities, Hanes said.

Free vaudeville shows will be held nightly until Saturday, when the "Queen of the Carnival" will be crowned.

Taft's Blinders

Senator Taft is conducting a one-man blockade to thwart the Mundt bill which would give legislative sanction to the State Department foreign information program. Surely this doesn't make much sense. He cannot prevent the Voice of America from continuing. That is already assured, at least on a limited scale, by a rider on the State Department appropriation bill. What he can do, however, is to doom the program to the status of a bastard child. The situation now is exactly the same as it was last year at this time—except that there is far greater need for the program and less money to meet the need.

In blocking the Mundt bill, Mr. Taft is voiding a prodigious amount of work expended in getting the legislation through the House and obtaining the indorsement of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. By preventing the program from being established on a businesslike basis, he is in effect confirming the very inefficiencies of which he has complained. Moreover, by blocking the Hatch amendment for an inquiry into it, he is obstructing the congressional investigation that is essential both to demonstrate the worth of the program and to correct its defects.

We hope that Senator Taft will be persuaded to relax his stubbornness. Whatever his own views, he ought to have enough respect for the opinions of his colleagues to allow the Mundt bill to come to a vote. Anything less is a pernicious abuse of democratic procedure. Furthermore, it is just plain bad business not to take this small precaution to protect our tremendous investment in public opinion throughout the world.

Economic Report

The midyear economic report prepared by the President's Council of Economic Advisers is a record of achievement that rightly deserves to be called "magnificent." In June the country attained a level of 60 million civilian jobs—a total that only the most optimistic after VJ-Day believed to be attainable. As a consequence, civilian production was at an all-time high by the middle of the year, and the most highly advertised depression in our history continues only in the imagination of the prophets of gloom. Finally the productivity of labor also increased, although there has been a slight reduction in the working week.

However, the primary function of the President's economic advisers is not to praise past accomplishments but to detect weak spots in the economic structure and suggest ways and means of overcoming them in order to insure a continued high level of activity. And certainly there are weak spots. The prosperity the country is now enjoying is essentially precarious, because it results from certain favoring circumstances that, as the report warns, are only "temporary props to our economic system." Full employment at existing high price levels is currently being sustained by the conversion demands of business, the backlog demands of consumers, extensive use of savings and credit, and a tremendous increase of exports over imports. Permanent prosperity cannot be based on such an uncertain foundation. It can only be insured by correcting existing maladjustments in prices and incomes that, in the absence of remedial action, will inevitably lead to a crisis bringing with it losses to business and unemployment.

Earlier appeals for voluntary price reductions to avert a threatened disaster of this kind, it is admitted, have not brought satisfactory responses from manufacturers. As a result, the attempts of wholesalers and retailers to reduce their prices in face of consumer resistance have been hampered, although a good many distributors have narrowed their profit margins. In view of the current renewed upward pressure on the prices of some basic commodities—a development that had not been anticipated—greater emphasis is now being placed on the importance of "restraint in pricing practice." Recent cost increases have undeniably impaired the ability of some firms to reduce prices, but the President's advisers point out that it is still possible in such cases to limit price increases instead of charging all that the traffic will bear. They have particularly in mind the industries affected by the coal wage settlement with John L. Lewis.

But the responsibility for stabilizing business does not rest solely with the heads of industry. Farmers, workers and the consuming public also have a duty to perform in assisting the processes of adjustment. In our opinion the Economic Report is open to criticism for underemphasizing the dangers of excessively high farm prices and the necessity of curbing demands for wage increases. "Though it is true," the Report says, "that farm prices have advanced even more than industrial prices in many cases, we now, after termination of price control, have only limited powers to deal with them except through increased production and through shifts in, or control of, demand." To be sure, labor is admonished not to press demands that would result in a price rise or prevent price reductions needed to provide market outlets for expanding output, but it is very gently admonished. Consumers also can help in keeping prices down by refusing to trade with profiteers.

All in all the Report is a useful document. A general criticism is its discursiveness. It covers too much ground to be easily digested by the average reader. We believe that the usefulness of the Council of Economic Advisers would be greatly enhanced if it were to make frequent reports on specific problems, together with recommendations for solving them. In that way the public would acquire the habit of looking to this expert body for guidance, and its influence would accordingly be strengthened. As it is, there is danger that the Council will come to be regarded as only one among many official bodies engaged in compiling and analyzing economic data for the enlightenment of the few instead of the many who most need to be instructed.

French Fears

A widespread fear has developed in France over the feeling that the United States intends to encourage the rise of a strong and industrialized Germany. The French are afraid that this is the way to bring back militarism in Germany. It is a fear that, no matter how impatient we may be about it, cannot be dismissed as unfounded. Three quarters of a century of experience with the furor Teutonicus lies in the French memory, and France has been bled white in coping with it. Perhaps, if there had been no other factor present, the French government would have seen the irrationality of France's alarm over American policy in Germany. But the government has to contend with a well-organized and powerful Communist minority ready to back up Soviet Russia in taking advantage of any error in tactics in the working out of the Marshall Plan. The error (from France's standpoint) was the announcement last week of the Joint Chiefs of Staff directive which, without naming figures, raised the sights for industrial reconstruction in Germany. Immediately a hullabaloo started among the French Communists, and was taken up by the non-Communists, so that the French government felt compelled to make what the French Ambassador called a demarche to the State Department. Presumably he expressed concern lest German industry get preferential treatment from the United States.

The directive on Germany last week did little more than confirm Secretary Byrnes' warning of last September 6 at Stuttgart. Both were called for by Russia's refusal to cooperate in treating Germany as an economic whole, as pledged under the Potsdam agreement. Secretary Byrnes said that in consequence of this noncooperation, we would not bind ourselves any longer to the restraints on German production imposed under the Potsdam agreement. There was no other option. As a result partly of the harshness of the Potsdam terms, mainly of Russia's noncooperation, our section of Germany was becoming an economic desert, and the residents pensioners of the United States. So greatly retarded was (and is) Germany that, even though yearly steel production under the Potsdam formula was set at the draconic figure of 5.8 million tons, actual performance last year was 2.6 million tons. No less than 300 million dollars was the cost to us last year of supporting the German population. It was an intolerable situation when Mr. Byrnes spoke, and it has not improved since then. The new directive is intended belatedly to fulfill the determination expressed by Mr. Byrnes to make our wards in Germany more or less self-supporting. Aside from the drain upon our resources, moreover, an idle Germany means a prostrate Europe. There would be no need for any Marshall Plan today if Germany had been put to work in the employment of its people and resources for the benefit of all Europe.

It is absurd to think that we are giving Germany prior consideration. But the fact remains that the United States is responsible for the administration of its own zone in Germany. It is our own task to put a prostrate Germany back on its feet. But what we are now aiming at under the Marshall Plan is the integration of German resources in a working economy of Europe. Actually the experts in Paris are at work to achieve precisely this objective. To be sure, the political future of Germany still remains to be settled, and we agree with the French that ideally this ought to have been settled prior to any cooperative attempt to reconstruct Europe. However, the stumbling block in this respect is the Soviet Union, though there has never been a meeting of minds on this problem among the other Allies. The French could help to promote such a meeting of minds in several ways that would inure to their own security in respect of Germany. They could join their zone with ours, as the British have done. They could have a 40-year pact with this country governing German militarization. Such actions would insure control of Germany, and it was shown in the years between wars that it was the atrophy of Allied statesmanship and Allied controls (and, of course, the retirement of America from Europe) and not secret rearmament that accounted for the comeback of an armed Germany. Such gestures on the part of the French would pave the way for an overdue political settlement of the Ruhr, the powerhouse of military Germany. In the meantime the new object in France's and Europe's interest should be to make the Ruhr the powerhouse for a pacific and progressive Europe.

Social Security

The House recently passed a bill freezing the present 1 per cent old-age-insurance tax on employers and employes for 1948 and 1949, and providing for subsequent increases in the rate up to a maximum of 2 per cent by 1957. Last Wednesday the Senate approved a bill merely freezing the tax for a two year period. House and Senate conferees are now reported to be deadlocked, and Representative Reed, chairman of the conference committee, says that unless the Senate yields, the tax will automatically jump to 2.5 per cent next January. With an expansion and general overhauling of the Social Security System in prospect, the House attempt to set up a schedule of rates for a long period of years is decidedly premature, since revisions in rates will undoubtedly be necessary. We think, therefore, that the Senate bill is much more acceptable, although approval of the House proposal would be preferable to inaction that would result in an immediate increase in payroll levies.

Much more important from a long range viewpoint than legislation providing for the freezing of social insurance taxes is a pending Senate resolution authorizing the Senate Finance Committee with the aid of experts, to make a comprehensive study of social security problems with particular reference to old age and survivors' insurance, coverage and taxes.

Two years ago, after postponing action on proposed amendments to the Social Security Act, the Senate approved the proposal to undertake a thorough review of the social security program, with the aid of a special committee. But no action was taken at the time, and the authority for creating the committee has now lapsed. Hence repassage of the lapsed resolution or a similar one is necessary for intelligent consideration of social security extension based on careful preliminary studies. A strong case can be made out for deferring increases in social security taxes pending a general overhaul of the system. But Congress cannot postpone indefinitely long-overdue reforms and content itself with provisionally freezing social security taxes. The proposed Senate investigation provides virtually the only assurance that the Eightieth Congress may undertake to fulfill pledges of both Republicans and Democrats in their party platforms to extend social security coverage. Failure to act now will be interpreted as showing lack of interest in the whole social security program.

Science Foundation

Both the House and the Senate have so vitiated the Science Foundation concept urged by the President long ago that we think their respective bills, now in conference, could best be consigned to oblivion. This newspaper championed the Science Foundation bill passed by the Senate last year. That measure, very wisely in our judgment, vested control in a full-time single administrator to be nominated by the President, with a national science board of distinguished scientists to serve in an advisory capacity. This year, however, the Senate passed a bill which would have placed control in a board of 24 scientists serving the Government only part time and empowered to prescribe the duties of an executive director to be named by the President. The House went this one worse by providing that the part-time board should actually choose the executive director.

This seems to us in either case administratively altogether unsound. It is an essential of good administration that an administrator be directly responsible to the President. A Government agency, moreover, ought to be administered only by men whose interests are identified exclusively with the Government. Scientists, however distinguished and patriotic, whose principal identification is with some private foundation or university, cannot be counted upon to exhibit the absolute impartiality or to possess the breadth of outlook demanded for the dispersal of great Federal grants. Their advice and assistance are important; but so long as they have outside allegiances they should not be cloaked with official authority. The appointing power is a presidential prerogative which should not be lightly waived. In this situation we think the President should not consent to the nullification of it as the House proposes or even to the impairment of it proposed in the Senate version. Greatly as we desire to see a national science foundation established, we believe the present bills should be allowed to lapse in the hope that, with a more sober second thought, Congress will produce something more satisfactory in its next session.

GOLDFINCH

O lovely wild canary, golden-breasted,
the sun has taken wing,
and learned to sing.
New song and light are one:
goldfinch . . . and sun.
Daintily you pause a while to feed upon a thistle's seed, and then resume your interrupted flight in rapid arcs
of undulating light—
till from the orchard, beyond the garden wall, swells the sweet echo of your plaintive call.

Socialist Allies

The Marshall Plan involves the United States in an interesting problem. We are the leading capitalist country in the world. The western European countries which we propose to aid are largely Socialist. If the basic conflict today between ourselves and Soviet Russia is capitalism versus socialism, then it might seem that we are sharpening the knife that will eventually cut our throats. Republican presidential candidate Stassen and Senator Ball seem to think so and would have the European countries abandon socialism as a condition for receiving our aid.

Aside from the fact that it would be rather difficult for those countries to reverse the course of their recent history, I think Stassen and Ball are mistaken in their viewpoint on Socialist Europe. To me it seems that the emerging socialism of England, France and Scandinavia are greater threats to the hegemony of the dictatorship of the proletariat than is the capitalist United States.

Those countries are living proofs that socialism might be achieved peacefully, by the ballot instead of the bullet, gradually and democratically instead of by revolutionary dictatorships that destroy civil liberties. The possibility of Ivan finding that out worries Stalin and Molotov a good deal more I'm sure, than the fact that Ivan might hear over a short wave radio that practically everybody in America has a tile bathroom and eats strawberries and cream for breakfast.

Thus I think the western European countries represent the real issue of our times: freedom and democracy versus virtual slavery and dictatorship. Viewed in this light the issue is not between economic systems but between ways of life and in this respect countries are indeed our allies and deserve our unstinted aid.

"Too Little Time"

I just read your July 16 editorial, "Too Little Time," and before I cool off I want to get this off my chest.

Why are you all so crazy about getting all these 400,000 DPs over here in this country? The President and General Marshall are going out of their way to get them. Why don't they do something about the poor devils that fought for this country? Give them homes and jobs, also make living costs come down so a man can keep his family alive?

You say, "For what the great majority of these people want is not a soup-kitchen existence as vagrants, but an opportunity to earn their bread and lead constructive lives." But how are the men in this country going to earn their bread when those 400,000 come over here and take over the greater part of 400,000 jobs that are held by the men who fought for this country?

I say help them, yes, but keep them over there and put them to work building up that country.

I am reminded of the words of Henry Ford on the subject of immigration.

"We may admit that this country was made by immigrants. So it was. The pioneers were immigrants. They came to a wilderness and made it blossom. We ought to be frank enough, however, to see that not all modern immigrants are of pioneer quality. It is one thing to come to a country to help make it, and quite another thing to come to a country as to a ripe tree to pick it. As soon as the type of immigrants changed to include people who came to pluck the country of its good things, immediately the body of the Nation felt its vitality decreasing, as with some slow insidious disease, and presently we knew we had immigration problems."

Security Secretary

Now that the passage of the armed forces merger bill seems assured, it seems important that we examine the desirable qualifications for the position of the secretary of national security.

Too often in the past the appointment of the secretaries of our national defense agencies have depended on political considerations rather than the particular qualifications of the man for the job. The national defense has suffered considerably under the improper administration or lack of administration by unqualified mediocrities appointed for such reasons.

The first and foremost qualification of the new sceretary should be that he have an intimate and broad understanding of the potentialities of modern science, our production facilities and the implications of the Atomic Age.

The new secretary of national security will be faced with a desstructive and creative job of great proportions. He must closely, objectively, and intelligently examine existing structures and tear down those built on obsolete or absolescent grounds and usages. Parasitical growths, duplications, etc., which have for years been absorbing life blood appropriations from more worthy agencies must be unmercifully pruned to proper proportions. The secretary must have a high grade, analytical, creative mind lacking personal political motivation and strong partisan ties. He should preferably be appointed by bipartisan consultation.

The secretary's job should be primarily one of broad policy formulation rather than administrative duties. In a democracy policies must be sold to the Congress and the people. It is therefore important that the secretary be an articulate salesman of ideas.

Federal Education Aid

If I hadn't read it with my own eyes, I really wouldn't have believed anyone could write such a letter as the one of July 12 by Mr. Stanley F. Morse attacking legislation for Federal school aid and a National Science Foundation. Mr. Morse apparently sees such legislation as a vicious plot to give everyone the education opportunity which he presumably would prefer to reserve for a limited number of "lucky" ones. If a man is foolish enough to be born the son of a tenant farmer in Mississippi, and has to forgo an adequate education in order to help his father support the family, it's his own fault, no doubt, for not being more particular in his choice of parents.

I can't think of two more proper activities for the Federal Government to engage in than the support of education and scientific research (though the present proposals omit support of the social sciences, an omission which I believe most unfortunate and short sighted). Of course, in order to agree that the Government should engage in such activity, one must assume that the United States Government is the agent of all the people, in the Lincoln tradition, and not, as Mr. Morse apparently believes, the tool of Marxist revolutionaries.

Mr. Morse gives away his real concern, in my opinion, when he diverges to make the seemingly irrelevant comment about "confiscatory taxes" and the resulting shameful reduction in "the incomes of the wealthy, philanthropic individuals and of corporations."

Does Mr. Morse really suppose we can leave such basic necessities as the support of education and science to the whims of wealthy "philanthropists?" True, some wealthy men have been generous in suport of worthy causes (and others have financed monstrously absurd undertakings)—but the support from this quarter is bound to be unpredictable and unintegrated. Coordinated, sustained support is needed for science and education, so that in time we may solve the problem of what Mr. Morse calls the "lazy, improvident, ignorant, and indigent citizens."

Olympic National Park Timber

In a letter in your June 30 issue headed "National Park Timber Grab," the writer described an effort of private lumber companies to permanently destroy for their immediate profit the ancient trees in the Olympic National Park in Washington State. Immediately I read it I sent the clipping to Ellery Foster, research director of the CIO International Woodworkers Union at Portland, Oreg.

Mr. Foster is a professional forester and an able exponent of true timber conservation, not only with respect to timber as such, but also with respect to the recreational, socialogical and community aspects of our Western forests. The CIO Woodworkers Union has been up front in espousing the best conservation measures for our timber resources. I feel, therefore, your readers will be interested in his reply:

". . . In my judgment and in that of many genuine conservationists the controversy about the Olympic Park is not by any means a clear-cut issue between conservationists and exploiters. The Olympic Park has been enlarged to perfectly tremendous proportions. It contains vast areas of high quality timber in which no logging whatever can be done as long as the trees remain within the boundaries of the national park.

"The fight is over whether some of that timber should be transferred back to the Forest Service (not to private interests but to the Government's principal forest conservation agency). The Forest Service would permit logging according to scientific methods, but not permit the forest to be destroyed.

"Everybody wants to retain a good, big Olympic National Park, but there is widespread feeling that the park today is much bigger than needed, and far too big if we are concerned at all about the future of established communities in western Washington.

"The Woodworkers are on record as favoring transfer of part of the park back to Forest Service control where timber can be harvested according to scientific methods. The Forest Service also supports this move. Unless this is done billions of feet of valuable trees will rot in the woods while communities decline because of lack of logs to support their industries.

"The issues in the case have been confused by the National Park Service and some of its most ardent supporters, who have the mistaken notion that forest conservation can be achieved only by putting an absolute padlock on the timber, and not permitting even scientific forestry to be practiced. Such a policy, of course, means tremendous waste. We can afford that in some choice, scenic areas. But we can't afford to do it over an entire, great region such as the Olympic Park has now become."

Washington Calling

U. N. And Greece

WHEN PRESIDENT TRUMAN presented his program of aid for Greece and Turkey, he was criticized for failing to use the machinery of the United Nations. It was felt to be a blow at the standing of the U. N.

In the four months since that historic message, a great deal has happened to put this criticism in a different light. First, the U. N. commission sent to the Balkans to inquire into the causes of the Greek border dispute could not agree on a report.

The split was along familiar lines. Russia and Poland dissented from the careful, thoroughly documented statement drawn up by the other members of the special commission that had gone over the ground. The dissenters would not accept open and shut facts as unearthed by the investigators.

Now for several weeks a wrangle has gone on in the Security Council. It is over an elementary proposal—whether the United Nations shall station a watchman on the Greek border. A commission in the role of watchman would merely report back to Lake Success the facts as observed on the spot.

The Soviet delegate has stalled and stalled and stalled on this proposal, with help from the Polish delegate. If the stalling tactics fail, then the Russians can fall back on the veto. This is occurring just at the time when the need for an impartial watchman is most obvious.

BEHIND THE increasing tempo of the rebellion in northern Greece is a concerted effort launched from across the Greek border. The stupidities of the Greek government to one side, this can be the only explanation of the new outbreaks.

If this is not true, then an impartial watchman could report the real facts and the Russians would have support for their position that the trouble is internal. Alexandre Parodi, French member of the U. N. commission to Greece, made the suggestion that the border commission be composed of representatives of the smaller states with no stake in the Greek tragedy. That may be sound advice.

It has by now become abundantly clear that the Russian game is to stall in the U. N. while the Russian satellites promote rebellion in Greece. While President Truman would have done well to ask the help of the U. N. in the Greek program, it is obvious that the Soviet tactics would never have permitted any immediate, practical program.

A significant sidelight on this whole controversy is the personality of the man who represented the United States on the U. N. commission to Greece—Mark Ethridge of Louisville, Ky. Ethridge has all his life been a progressive. His enemies have sometimes called him a radical.

Two years ago President Truman sent him on a mission to the Balkans. Like many other progressives, he wanted to believe the best about Soviet Russia, and if he went with any bias, it was in that direction.

But he is also a very able newspaperman who has learned to appraise and correlate the facts that come to his attention. In the course of several prolonged trips to Eastern Europe he saw repeated evidence of Communist repression and Communist brutality.

AS A MEMBER of the U. N. delegation to Greece he fought persistently and resourcefully to bring out the facts. It was no easy task. The Russian opposition constantly put obstacles in his way. In many ways it was a thankless task. While it won the enmity of the Slavic bloc, few Americans have understood the importance of the effort Ethridge made as American delegate.

Here is a fair-minded man, of liberal-progressive thought, who became convinced of the reality of the Soviet plot. Unlike a certain type of liberal, who would prefer not to be troubled by facts, Ethridge had both the ability and the courage to examine the truth in all its tragic meaning.

He saw that while persistent Communist propaganda made out the Greek government to be wholly repressive, the facts did not tally with that propaganda. Ethridge learned that more democratic freedoms exist in Greece than in the satellite states, where repression is savage and unremitting.

Ethridge might well have played an important role in our own undertaking in Greece. The petty spite of certain Senators made this impossible.

The United Nations was not an instrument for the relief of Greece. Recent events have demonstrated that unmistakably.

Kaywood Gardens

On page 14 of The Post of July 16, in the story on Kaywood Gardens, I am quoted as follows:

"According to Habid, Kaywood Gardens charges 'the highest rent for any project in the Washington area,' with $29.50 asked for an efficiency unit, $60 to $65 for one-bedroom units, and $70 to $75 for two-bedroom apartments."

I believe that I have been quoted incorrectly during my long telephone conversation with a member of your staff and I believe that this quote should have read:

"According to Habib, Kaywood Gardens charges one of "the highest rents for any project in the Washington area," with $49.50 asked for an efficiency unit, $60 to $65 for one-bedroom units, and $70 to $75 for two-bedroom apartments.

Abolishing The Veto

By Sumner Welles

Would This Make U.N. A Reality?

THE ISSUES raised by the bipartisan resolutions recently introduced in the Congress which urge an immediate revision of the United Nations Charter and the restriction of the veto require sober thinking and plain speaking.

Three resolutions have been introduced. They range from a demand that the President summon a general conference "for the purpose of making the United Nations capable of enacting, interpreting and enforcing world law" to a recommendation that amendments to the Charter be adopted "that will strengthen the United Nations as an instrument to prevent war and maintain world peace."

The sponsors of one of these resolutions assert: "There is no surer way of determining whether the Soviet Union is bent on conquest than by learning whether she would be willing to go along with other nations in creating a United Nations which would guarantee her security."

ARTICLE 109 of the Charter provides that a conference of the United Nations may be held to review the Charter, if two thirds of the members of the General Assembly and any seven members of the Security Council so determine, and that any alterations of the Charter recommended by a two-thirds vote of such conference shall take effect when ratified by two thirds of the members of the United Nations, including all of the permanent members of the Security Council.

It is, therefore, clear that even if the suggested conference recommended the amendments desired by those who support the pending resolutions, the Soviet Union could, under the terms of the Charter, block their adoption.

The measures introduced in the Congress have naturally been acclaimed with loud hosannas by the various groups in this country that are clamoring for the prompt establishment of a world republic or a world government.

One of the least highfalutin of these organizations is the United World Federalists. It is directed by outstanding citizens who are versed in foreign affairs and who believe in the United Nations. This organization commends the Senators and Congressmen who have introduced these resolutions, "for taking the lead toward making peace through the U.N. a reality rather than a promise." It urges that the resolutions "now receive insistent vigorous support if the U.N. is to be strengthened in time to end the growing threat of war."

THERE CAN BE no doubt that the Charter contains defects which should be corrected, and that the exaggerated use of the veto by the Soviet Union has frequently hamstrung the United Nations. The all-important question is whether the steps contemplated by these congressional resolutions are in fact calculated to "strengthen the United Nations," and to make "peace through the U.N. a reality."

We have entered a most dangerous period. Recent events are already threatening to divide the world into two hostile camps. The Politbureau has pursued an aggressive and expansionist course. The Soviet leaders have shown themselves to be pathologically suspicious as well as increasingly fearful of the military and economic strength of the West. By their most recent maneuvers they are doing irreparable damage to the vital interests of the Russian people as well as to those of the rest of the world.

Yet is it likely that this Government can now change Russian policies by any such showdown as would result from our demand for a revision of the Charter and a limitation of the Soviets' veto rights? The Soviet Union faces an adverse majority on almost every issue coming before the United Nations. From Russia's standpoint her veto right is her only assurance that the United Nations will not endanger Russian security. Under present world conditions the Kremlin will not relinquish that right.

IF A United Nations conference were now to recommend Charter amendments to which Russia objects, what would be the practical results? Russia would either veto such amendments, in which case the present split between the East and the West would be still further intensified, or Russia and her satellites would abandon the United Nations.

In the latter event, what hope would we then have of a peaceful world? The United Nations would become merely an alliance directed against Russia and the countries within her sphere of influence. There would no longer be any universal organization. We ourselves have known from the outset that the United Nations, as a universal organization, cannot succeed unless Soviet-American cooperation can be achieved.

An American foreign policy designed to maintain the United Nations intact, while at the same time based upon a long-range program of reconstruction intended to check Soviet expansion wherever it may be attempted, is not a dramatic policy nor can it be a popular policy. For it implies protracted patience, persistent effort and continued burdens upon the taxpayers. Yet it is the only policy that may prevent war and that may eventually convince the Russian people that cooperation, rather than antagonism, between the West and the East is in their own interest.

A divided world will not solve the problems of atomic control, of disarmament, of economic reconstruction, nor any of the other grave international questions which today confront us. The measures proposed in the Congress would merely force the issue. They would probably obliterate the last glimmer of hope which we possess of avoiding a two-world order.

France And The Marshall Plan

PREMIER RAMADIER of France did a major disservice to western Europe's recovery efforts when he declared that the Marshall Plan would fail unless the Soviet Union and its satellites were persuaded to take part.

NOVER

This is not a recipe for success; it is a certain prescription for failure. There is not the slightest reason to believe that the French statesman's olive branch will persuade Russia to reverse her stand. What is far more likely is that it will cause the Kremlin to redouble its efforts to sabotage the plan.

THERE WAS nothing to prevent Russia from coming in on the ground floor in the effort to rebuild Europe's shattered economy and raise that continent's desperately low standard of living.

Russia was invited to do so by Great Britain and France. She decided against it. It was only then, and with the greatest reluctance, that the western nations agreed to go ahead without Russia.

They did so in the clear realization that if recovery is delayed chaos will thrive. This, it is suspected, is one of the chief reasons why Russia objects to the Marshall Plan. Chaos is the handmaiden of the men in the Kremlin.

WITH FANTASTIC unrealism, M. Ramadier chooses to regard the Russian attitude as the product of misunderstanding.

"We must overcome Russia's distrust so that she shall consent to be reintegrated in Europe," he said. Yet the only way to overcome that "distrust" is to do Russia's bidding.

That would mean large-scale unconditional loans from the United States to individual countries, with nations in the Soviet sphere given priority. Such a program, voiced by Foreign Minister Molotov at Paris at the close of the three-power conference, was too much for Messrs. Bevin and Bidault to swallow. It would certainly be too much for the United States to down.

THE ONLY REAL way Russia could be got to cooperate in the European recovery effort is for the 16 nations in the Cooperation Committee that has just been set up, to plan and, with American help, carry out a cooperative program of self-help.

Were that done the pull of western Europe on Russia's satellites in eastern Europe would be such as to create great strains in the Soviet sphere of influence. Then, in self-defense, Russia might find it desirable to join in making the recovery program truly all-European. In the meantime, however, her efforts are being directed to preventing the Marshall Plan from ever coming into force.

IT IS MUCH easier to understand why M. Ramadier said what he did than to approve of his saying it.

The Russians have laid down a fierce propaganda barrage against every country that has shown a willingness to participate in the Marshall program. The Ramadier government, in particular, is under heavy assault, particularly from the Communists who are not only France's leading party but also dominate the trade unions.

Russian propaganda is having its effect. An analysis of the French press shows that even non-Communist elements have begun to ask questions regarding the Marshall Plan which reflect doubts sedulously spread by Moscow's agents.

Many Frenchmen are wondering whether the United States really plans to go through with the Marshall offer. They are fearful of the effects of the division of Europe into two camps, one headed by a tough, truculent and ruthless Russia, and the other looking toward a distant and what looks to them like a confused and slow-paced America.

FURTHERMORE, the argument used again and again by the Communists, that the chief beneficiary of the Marshall Plan will be Germany, has struck fire in the worried minds of the French. The new directive to General Clay which allows for a substantial increase in the German level of industry seems proof positive of the Communist contention regarding the American program.

From the viewpoint of Europe's over-all recovery, there is very much to be said for the new German directive. Nonetheless, bearing France's deep-rooted fear of a powerful Germany in mind, it is essential that France's views regarding the German industrial level be taken into account.

The French must be persuaded anew that America's basic aim is the recovery of Europe as a whole or at least that part of it which is prepared to join in a program of self-help. Such a program will inevitably require that a greater use be made of Germany's industrial and mineral resources than has been the case since V-E Day. This does not mean and cannot mean restoring Germany's war-making capactiy.

Flood Control Funds Upped By Senate Unit

By The Associated Press

A Senate Appropriations Subcommittee approved yesterday a 343-million-dollar budget for flood control and navigation construction, an increase of $208,566,000 over the amount in a House bill.

The measure takes into account but does not meet President Truman's request for 250 million dollars for Mississippi basin flood control work, Chairman Gurney (R., S. Dak.) said. The subcommittee recommended about 300 million dollars for all flood control and $43,304,200 for navigation construction during the fiscal year which began July 1.

The House bill, passed before the President made his request, carried $122,269,800 for flood control construction and $17,367,700 for navigation.

The Senate group increased from 24 million dollars to 50 million dollars an appropriation for the lower Mississippi Valley flood control program. Of the total 12 million dollars is for maintenance work.

Gurney did not make public the overall amounts for maintenance of existing projects but other members said they would be adequate.

Projects approved by the subcommittee included (the subcommittee recommendations are followed with the House-approved figures in parentheses, if the House voted any money):

Flood Control—Virginia: Philpott Res. $250,000 ($250,000).

Rivers and Harbors—Virginia: James River, $80,000 ($80,000); Newport News Creek, $145,000 (none).

$30,000 Approved For Government Relationship Study

By The Associated Press

The Senate Committee on Executive Expenditures yesterday approved a bill to appropriate $30,000 to finance a study of the relationship of Federal, State and municipal governments.

Chairman Aiken (R., Vt.) said the study would involve the possibility of dividing taxing fields between the various governments and also would include an investigation into duplications in law enforcement and other fields.

Aiken already has named a five-member subcommittee, made up of former Governors, to conduct the study. They are: Senators Bricker (R., Ohio), Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), Thye (R., Minn.), O'Conor (D., Md.) and Hoey (D., N. C.).

The President's Calling List

By The Associated Press

President Truman yesterday had the following callers:

10:15—Representative Plumley (R., Vt.).

12:00—Members of the Legislative Yuan Mission.

12:15 p.m.—Dr. Joao Antonio de Bianchi, Portugese Ambassador.

12:30—Secretary of State Marshall.

1:00—Lunch.

3:45—Representative John McCormack (D., Mass.).

Senate Balks At House Bill On Unification

The Senate refused yesterday to accept the House's version of legislation to unify the armed services and appointed a committee to seek a compromise.

Senate conferees are Senators Gurney (R., S. Dak.), Saltonstall (R., Mass.), Morse (R. Oreg.), Baldwin (R., Conn.), Tydings (D., Md.), Russell (D., Ga.), and Byrd (D. Va.).

In passing its version of the measure last Saturday, the House insisted upon writing in two requirements previously rejected by the Senate.

They specify that:

1. The Marine Corps shall be retained intact, and the Navy shall be guaranteed retention of its air arm, including carrier and land-based aircraft plus the responsibility for antisubmarine warfare, and;

2. A civilian shall be appointed to the $14,000 a year job as director of the Office of Central Intelligence to be set up under the bill—with a proviso that this office cannot exercise domestic police or espionage functions.

Senate opponents of the Marine Corps and naval aviation restrictions insisted that Congress could not legislate "tactical matters" and contended they should be left for the three branches, Army, Navy and Air Forces, to work out by agreement rather than by law.

Canning Center Opens With 37 Women on Hand

The District Community Canning Center, 1640 Wisconsin ave. nw., opened yesterday morning as 37 local women began putting up home-grown fruits and vegetables.

Superintendent George H. Christy described the turnout as "fair," but said that business would get heavier as the season for fresh vegetables advances.

Over 800,000 cans of fruits and vegetables were canned at the fully equipped center last year, according to Christy. Now that sugar is available, he said, this year may set a record for canned foods.

The center is open from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p. m. Mondays through Wednesdays, and from 3 p.m. to 11:30 p.m., Thursdays and Fridays. Canning facilities may be used only by appointment, which should be made two days ahead by calling NAtional 6000, extension 2523.

Roosevelt Papers Were Gift To U. S., Surrogate Decides

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., July 21 (AP).—The papers and files of Franklin D. Roosevelt were held today to be a "valid and effective" gift of the late President to the United States to be kept in the library which he established at his Hyde Park home.

Dutchess County Surrogate Frederick S. Quinterro made the ruling in an action brought by Roosevelt's executors to get legal determination on the question whether the papers should go to the library or were a part of the estate.

Availability Isn't Clear

It was not made clear immediately whether the ruling automatically made the documents available to all branches of the Federal Government.

Earle R. Koons, attorney for the Roosevelt estate, said in New York he did not believe this question figured in the surrogate's decision.

Several months ago Fred W. Shipman, in charge of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library at Hyde Park, said, "If the Roosevelt papers are turned over to the Government by court order, the United States archivist would face no insurmountable problem in making the papers available to a Senate committee or any other Government body for official use."

He could not be reached today.

Buck Declines Comment

In Washington, Dr. Solon J. Buck, archivist of the United States, declined comment on the surrogate's decision until he had learned of it officially. The Hyde Park Library is under his jurisdiction.

One official, who asked that his name not be used, said "not all Government property is accessible to all Government officials. But I don't know what rule might apply to the Roosevelt papers."

The special Senate War Investigating Committee several weeks ago unsuccessfully sought permission to go through the late President's papers in search of data on Navy purchases of Arabian oil.

Last Saturday the same committee issued a subpena to the Roosevelt executors for papers dealing with war contracts of the Hughes Tool Co. and the Kaiser-Hughes Corp.

Checking Plane Contracts.

The committee is checking planes which these firms signed contracts to manufacture. The tool company is headed by Howard Hughes, the aviator. He and Henry Kaiser, the industrialist, were associated in the other concern.

Koons said the executors would make "every effort" to furnish the subpenaed papers, but that it was not known at once if they were included in the documents now stored at the Hyde Park Library.

Surrogate Quinterro said, "The fact Mr. Roosevelt makes no mention of papers in the will executed by him November 12, 1941, which date was several months after the opening and dedication of the library, gives rise to a fair inference that he already had effectively disposed of those papers and that they were not to be regarded as part of his estate."

Lutheran Synod Reelects Behnken

Chicago, July 21 (AP).—The Rev. John W. Behnken of Oak Park, Ill., was reelected to his fifth term as general president of the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Missouri, Ohio and other States today.

Other elections will be held later.

At the meeting's first business session today, Dr. Behnken said the number of communicants reached 1,564,000 this year.

Dr. Behnken said more than one third of the synod's congregations had rejected a new name for the synod—"The Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod"—proposed by the last convention.

Farm State Senators Win Fight on Agriculture Funds

Farm State Senators won their fight yesterday to instruct Senate members of the conference committee considering Agriculture Appropriations to stand pat for more liberal allowances than those sought by the House.

The Senate voted to hold out for 295 million dollars for Soil Conservation payments. Last Friday the House instructed its conferees to hold out for a total of 265 million dollars for this item in the bill.

The Senate also voted to insist on its view for meat inspection. The Senate wants 11 million dollars provided for Federal meat inspection. The House allowed a "revolving fund" of five million dollars, with a requirement that meat packers repay the inspection costs to the Government.

The Senate also held out for 75 million dollars for the national school lunch program, which the House has cut to 45 million.

The Senate also voted to stand pat for a loan fund of 20 million dollars for farm tenants wishing to buy farms. The House had ordered this cut from the budget.

The measure now goes to the Conference Committee again for study. The committee reported last week failure to agree on the four items, and asked new instructions to refuse to recede from their original demands. Both Houses have now voted

C. U. Play Pits Science, Faith

By Richard L. Coe

THERE IS A GOOD DEAL more meat in the second play of Catholic University's playwriting festival than in the farcical first. "Kingdom of the Blind," by Frank Ford, is the play and several tenets of the Roman Catholic faith are his subject.

Fundamentally the story concerns the church's acceptance of diabolical possession, which stems from the gospel story of the swine possessed by the devil, who hurl themselves into the sea, and from Christ's casting of the devil out of Mary Magdalene. Similar instances in our own day have been officially recognized by the church.

With this as his background, Ford has conceived a situation in which science vies with religion to cure a girl whose mental illness mystifies a psychiatrist and a priest. The girl's traumatic states reveal facets in the other characters which could only be known by supernatural means. It is an extraordinary story, but the extraordinary is precisely the theme of the play.

Ford has done a splendid job of telling it, both in constructing the story so one's interest is held and in many splendid passages of imaginative writing. One could hardly ask for a clearer fashion of setting forth his argument that, in the things which science cannot explain, faith is the only answer.

The fact remains that for the non-Catholic the point of view is fixed. He has introduced several kinds of disbelievers into his characters, all of whom eventually—and quite naturally within the story—come to the conclusion (as scientists often admit) that there is something beyond the mind which cannot be understood, which can only be believed. His weakest character in the argument is the man of science, a man whose faith in his psychiatric art seems meager when confronted with a question he must have had to face before.

An only daughter of farm parents has been an inspiration of goodness until just before the play begins, but she now has become mentally ill. A psychiatrist makes little headway. The village priest senses that she should be his charge, but feels too spiritually weak to be of real aid.

During the two acts the girl forces all in the house to look back into their lives. Her parents hate each other because the mother has been afraid to bear more children. A newspaperman who is interested in a possible story realizes that he has failed the true story of his life. The priest is revealed as unworthy of his office because he has failed his faith. The psychiatrist has been guilty of matricide—he killed his doctor-mother in mercy for her painful disease.

THE CAST:

Splendidly Performed

The girl's earlier faith defeats the fiend within her and through her triumph the others live to mend their ways. The psychiatrist realizes that pure science is not enough.

Under John Baird's direction the group has given the play its accustomed production skill. The playing, and particularly the speaking, is finely done. Ford has written in free verse, and the greatest compliment one can give these actors is that they read it with beauty and remarkable facility. The group's official title—"speech and drama department"—is not just an empty phrase, thanks to the splendid coaching of Dr. Josephine McGarry Callan.

Phyllis Berl, in the difficult role of the girl, gives a splendid performance, notable, again, for her fine speaking. Joan O'Byrne, as the mother, is astute in her troubled portrait. Dan Rodden, as the psychiatrist, ably suggests the growing bewilderment of the man. John Dugan's newshawk and John Easley's priest also are ably done.

"Kingdom of the Blind" is a provocative drama, skillfully performed, and does credit to Father Hartke's ambitious series. It will continue at the University Theater on the campus through August 9, Sundays excepted.

Leonard or Eugene?

Lyons Get Crossed in Red Network

New York—When I first began to write a column for the New York Post people to whom I was introduced sometimes confused me with Eugene Lyons, the anti-Stalin expert and author of "Assignment in Utopia." In those early years I merely explained to them that I was Leonard and not Eugene Lyons.

Leonard Lyons

But then came complicating involvements. The New York Post started to publish a series of articles by Eugene Lyons, denouncing the Stalin regime, and my telephone lines were immediately clogged by calls from indignant but anonymous men and women who in deep, strange accents accused me of having engaged in shady transactions in Moscow which produced the anti-Soviet bias apparent in my writings. I told these callers that I had never been to Russia, that the Soviet government refused me a visa, and that they probably wished to register their complaints with the other "Mr. Lyons" on the New York Post.

The calls nevertheless persisted, and my beleaguered secretary and I finally decided that truth and directness were the best solution. When we lifted the receivers and heard angry voices begin: "Listen, you so-andso," we immediately interrupted to supply them with Eugene Lyons' home telephone number.

In the ensuing years my photograph appeared atop my column and this, coupled with the fact that Eugene Lyons' name no longer was appearing on Stalin-Is-a-Bum books, brought a respite in the matter of mistaken identities. Then

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THERE'S A NEW PLAQUE hanging today in baseball's Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N. Y., and the likeness to Clark Griffith is no coincidence. The 77-year-old owner of the Nats was voted into the company of the game's immortal figures, and it was high time.

POVICH

As the owner of a seventh-place ball club that hasn't won a pennant in 14 years, Griffith obviously wasn't swept into Cooperstown on the crest of any recent boom. It was recognition, finally, of the lusty contributions Griffith has made to baseball.

There wouldn't have been an American league without him. He was one of the three men who founded the league. Ban Johnson and Charles Comiskey were the others. But it was Griffith who was taking the greater gamble, and had more to lose when he took the step.

Griffith was one of the star pitchers for Pop Anson's Chicago Colts in 1900, and drawing the salary limit. He had a snug, secure job with the Colts when he cast his lot with Johnson and Comiskey and the new league. Griffith was the procurer for the new league, which had money and parks, but no players worthy of a major league.

DURING THAT winter of 1900-01, Griffith traipsed the icy North, the Midwest, and the bayous of the Gulf Coast searching out players who might jump to the new league, and using his persuasion to convince them its major league destiny was secure. He used himself as the best example of a top players who had confidence enough in the new league to make the jump, and he landed 30 of the National League's stars for the American League.

He was rewarded for that effort by being given the management of the White Sox and he became the American League's first pennant-winning manager in the season of 1901. He won 27 games that year to lead the league in pitching as well. He didn't weigh 155 pounds, never had a fast ball, pitched with his head, and he hit .300, too.

With the American League thus firmly established in Chicago, Johnson and Comiskey found another job for Griffith—to break the Giants' monopoly on big league baseball in New York, where the American League was without a team. It was a rough assignment that Griffith got in 1904. The Giants owned the town, as it were, and had a surpassing figure in Manager John McGraw, who had jumped the American League at the outset.

WHEN THE Giants used tough tactics to keep Griffith out of New York, threatening to use their political influence to halt the subway and streetcar lines short of the site Griffith had picked out for his park in the upper Bronx, Griffith retaliated. He enlisted the aid of Tammany politicians who bought into the club and smoothed its transportation problems.

Griffith's Highland Park which gave the name of Highlanders to the original Yankees, was the site of an old Revolutionary War battleground, and Griffith relates how, with the workmen hustling to get the diamond into playing condition by April, he amassed a collection of Indian arrow heads and 1776 vintage grapeshot and canister.

He didn't win a pennant in New York because Jack Chesbro made that celebrated wild pitch against the Red Sox on the final day of the season, and ultimately Griffith moved to Cincinnati as manager in 1909. He was swallowing his pride to take that job because it meant joining forces with the National League which he had battled fiercely throughout the formative years of the American League.

THERE CAME THE CHANCE to buy into the Washington club in 1912, and Griffith did, pawning his Montana ranch to get the necessary funds. He was chancing it in that year because Washington had been the graveyard of baseball investments to that point, and Griffith had no great security in his post as manager of the team unless he could produce a good ball team. He did. He elevated the 1911 Nats to second in his first season, and second again in 1913.

There were lean days for Griffith in Washington, though, during the first World War and after. The next newcomer to the club might be the sheriff putting the franchise up for auction, Griffith always feared. But in 1920, he gambled all his worldly goods in a purchase of 40 per cent of the stock which elevated him to the presidency of the club, and four years later he had a pennant winner.

He's the only club president in baseball, except Connie Mack, who came up from the ranks of the players. He's the only owner in the business who knows more baseball than his manager. To Griffith's friendship with American Presidents, baseball owes its survival during two wars. That Cooperstown niche is just a small payment on the game's debt to the man.

Weary Nats Back Home With Tigers

The road-weary Nats, now grateful for a small item like a friendly face, return home to their Griffith Stadium public tonight, but still pursued by the hostile West.

Awaiting the Nats are the Detroit Tigers, current sensation of the league, who got that way first by stopping the Yankees' 19-game winning streak last week and then licking the Yanks three out of four to stay within 9½ games of the lead in second place.

Griffith Stadium ought to be pleasant to the gaze of the Nats before they plunge into a four-game series with the Tigers, at least. Their home park is the only place in the league where the Nats haven't lost more games than they've won. They've finished in front 20 times in 39 games at the Stadium in contrast to their 16-23 record on the road.

Tonight, Early Wynn will attempt to stop the Tigers. He will be bidding for his eleventh victory of the year, but he has lost seven games.

On the road, the Nats had a dismal tour of it, winning only 6 of their 21 starts and landing in seventh place 20½ games out of it in contrast to their mere 7½-game deficit when they took off on their disastrous trip.

Adding to Manager Ossie Bluege's troubles with his pitching staff is the batting decline of Buddy Lewis, who has dropped to an undecorative .267. In fact, there isn't a .300 hitter on the club with the exception of Rick Farrell, who has played in only 20 games. Stan Spence has sloughed off to a .286 figure.

Hudson Improved

Bluege yesterday was more distressed by the manner in which the Nats had been losing games than he was by the defeats. "When we got some hitting, our pitching went sour. When the pitching was good, we didn't hit," he said.

Bluege saw little immediate help for the Nats. He admitted there was dim prospect of any aid from the club's farm teams, pointing out that Gil Coan of Chattanooga was the only Washington-owned player in the minors who might be of value.

Sid Hudson, who walked out of a Detroit game last week with a sore arm, reported improvement yesterday, however, and now doubts that he will miss a pitching turn.

Hutchinson Hurls For Tigers Tonight

Righthander Fred Hutchinson, who halted the Yankee winning streak at 19 in a row with a two-hit, shutout job in Detroit last Friday, will be on the hill for the Tigers tonight against the Nats. He'll be working for his ninth victory.

Oliveri Stroke Off Publinx Pace With 71

Minneapolis, July 21 (AP).—The narrow fairways and tricky greens of the Meadowbrook course kept all but five players at par figures or above today as 179 players toured the first 18 qualifying holes in the National public links golf tournament.

Holding low scores of 70—two under par—were Avery Beck, 33, Raleigh, N. C., loan firm operator, and Donald J. Dostert, 23-year-old St. Paul bookbinder, who shot each of the nines in 35s.

Wilfred Crossley of Atlanta, Ga., 34, New England champion in 1938 and former private club player, matched par of 36 on the out nine and whittled o two strokes on the back nine for a 34.

Only two others, Andrew J. Oliveri of Washington, D. C., and Patrick J. Boyle of Eveleth, Minn., were able to break par. They had 71s. Olivere shot a 36—35—71.

Eight players posted par figures. They were John Bloyer of St. Paul, Claire Emery and Clare Swanson, both of Salt Lake City; Warren G. Campbell of Seattle, Wash, Robert J. Silvestri of San Francisco, Paul Gore of Denver, Colo., and Alfred Littleton, Wichita, Kans.; A. F. Rockholt, Memphis, Tenn.

William M. Cole shot a 39—37—76, and William Collins posted a 37—40—77. Both are from Baltimore. Earl L. Marcey, the only other Washington, D. C., player competing, carded a 41—39—80.

The original field of 180 lost one player at tee-off time, Arthur Moore of Memphis, Tenn., went to a hospital Sunday and underwent an operation for acute appendicitis.

The second 18 holes of qualifying will be run off Tuesday.

Flying Bill Mathis Runs Here Friday, Goes to West Indies

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Bill Mathis' flying feet have carried him to many a collegiate track crown over the Nation since he graduated from Cardozo High here in 1945, but his heart still belongs to his home town, Washington, and to his high school alma mater.

Bill made that very plain yesterday afternoon as he worked out on the Francis Junior High School track in preparation for events on his late-summer schedule.

Mathis, national AAU 100-meter champion for the University of Illinois, will leave by plane Saturday for a series of exhibitions with a collection of American runners in the British West Indies.

But before he goes, Mathis will take part in two special races in an attempt to boost attendance at the Junior Olympics Day track program for the kids Friday afternoon at Banneker Recreation Center.

He Has Done 9.5 in 100

Mathis usually runs the 100-yard dash in 9.6 seconds, but twice in the past two years at Illinois, he has hit 9.5, just one-tenth of a second off the world record. He still has two years left at Illinois in which to take a crack at the mark.

For his success on the track, Bill gives full credit to Welford Jackson, who first recognized his talents when Bill was still in Francis Junior High School, and to Sylvester Hall, the Cardozo High coach whose teams have dominated the scholastic events in the Penn Relays for the past five years.

The most amazing part of the Mathis success story is that he has done so well despite his slight build. Bill stands only five feet, six inches tall, and weighs 147.

At Illinois, Bill has learned to appreciate the disadvantage of his small size. He often has raced his great teammate from the British West Indies, Herb McKenley over the 100, 220 and 440-yard distances.

Can Beat 'Mac' in Century

He's never lost to Herb in the 100, but in the 220 and 440, Herb's specialties, Bill usually winds up a good second.

Herb's advantage in the 220 and 440 lies in his 10-foot stride which measures three feet more than Mathis'. The six foot, one inch McKenley holds the world record in the 440 at 46.3, but it has not yet been officially recognized.

Mathis' foes in the Junior Olympics special 100-yard dash will be Clarence Turner, another former Cardozo star now at Illinois; Arthur Smith, of Howard University; Sam Wright, of Phelps Vocational School, and Marcellus Boston of Cardozo.

Mathis smiles proudly when he talks of Boston, who has succeeded Bill as high school sprint champ of Washington.

"He runs the hundred in 9.8, just like I did at Cardozo. He's going to be a great college runner. But then he should be great," he says. "He goes to Cardozo, doesn't he?"

Lions Renew Bidding for Bill Dudley

By Al Costello
Post Reporter

"BULLET BILL" DUDLEY, the University of Virginia all-American may be through with pro football, as he says, but pro football isn't quite convinced.

Fred Mandel, jr., wealthy owner of the Detroit Lions who isn't used to taking no for an answer, yesterday was in town admittedly for the purpose of luring "Bullet Bill" back into the player ranks with Detroit Lions. Dudley presently is coaching at his alma mater.

Mandel has reopened negotiations with Art Rooney, owner of the Pittsburgh Steelers, for Dudley's services. Moreover, Mandel has Rooney's permission to talk contract terms with Bill.

Mandel knows he will have to bid high in cash in addition to playing concessions to get Dudley's signature on a contract but is prepared to do so.

Dudley, who was a 60-minute player in the Steelers' rise to second place in the Eastern Division last year, announced he was through with pro ball at the season's end, explaining the rigors of the pro game were too tough for a 170 pounder, such as himself.

DUDLEY and Pittsburgh Coach Jock Sutherland, it was understood, didn't see eye-to-eye and Dudley felt he was being overworked in playing practically every minute of every game. He was named the league's most valuable player.

Dudley reportedly disliked the single wing Sutherland used with the accent on power. Dudley played the "T" formation in college under Frank Murray and prefers that system.

The Lions this year will discard the Notre Dame system with Coach Gus Dorais installing the "T" now that Dorais has secured the services of Roy Zimmerman, a forme rRedskin and an accomplished "T" quarterback from the Philadelphia Eagles.

Mandel said yesterday he has "hopes of making a deal for Dudley."

"It would be mighty interesting to see what would happen with Zimmerman throwing in Dudley's direction," he said.

It's Marriage, Not Football for Bill

Bill Dudley, contacted by phone at his Charlottesville, Va., home last night, told The Washington Post he had no plans for the 1947 season other than continuing his coaching duties at University of Virginia, where he is assistant to Head Coach Art Guepe. He said he had heard only "vague rumors" of his becoming the football property of the Detroit Lions.

Dudley added he did not know what he would do if he were offered a contract so attractive that it would be poor business to turn it down. He said he was most concerned at present with wedding plans. He will be married to Miss Elizabeth Leininger, of Lynchburg, Va., on July 29.

Brooks Now Lead Giants By 4 Games

Brooklyn, July 21 (AP).—Coming from behind in each game, the Brooklyn Dodgers won both ends of a double-header from the Cincinnati Reds today 7-4 and 4-3 to increase their National League lead over the runner-up New York Giants to four full games.

The season's largest crowd, 35,092, saw the Reds get off to an early 4-2 lead in the third inning of the first game, getting the last two runs on Babe Young's inside-the-park home run with Benny Zientara on base. Pete Reiser jarred his left shoulder trying for Young's deep smash to right center field, and is expected to be out for three days. He suffered no dislocation as at first feared.

The Dodgers knocked out Bucky Walters, Red starting pitcher in the sixth wtih a two-run spurt which tied the score and continued the assault against Harry Gumbert in the seventh.

Bruce Edwards, who drove in four Brooklyn runs in the first game, won the second with a ninth-inning single which scored Carl Furillo from second. Trailing 3-1, the Dodgers had pulled up into a tie on homers by Furillo and Dixie Walker.

With one out in the ninth Furillo opened the winning rally with his third hit off Kent Peterson, and Walker sent him to second by dunking a handle hit into shortstop Eddie Miller to bring in Furillo.

Joe Hatten went all the way for his ninth victory, and first against a club other than the Chicago Cubs and Philadelphia Phillies.

Redskins Lose Koniszewski Who Becomes Coach

John Koniszewski, regular Redskin tackle for the past two years and a former George Washington Univeristy football and basketball star, yesterday advised the Washington Redskins he was quitting the pro game in favor of a coaching career.

Koniszewski told the club he had accepted the position of assistant football coach at Scranton University and would not report to the Los Angeles camp when the Redskins open training August 4.

The big fellow, a 6-foot 2-inch, 245-pounder, played three years with G. W., starting as a fullback, switching to tackle when an injury slowed him down. He was regular center on the Colonials' 1940-'41 basketball team.

At the same time the Redskins yesterday announced the signing of Len Noble, a 6-foot, 2-inch, 220-pound guard, who formerly played with Penn State. He was signed as a free agent.

Bratton Tries to Duck Jones Bout; Officials Hold Him to It

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The Boxing Commissions of the District of Columbia and the State of Illinois came to the rescue of Matchmaker Gabe Menendez yesterday, saving his August 4 lightweight tussle between Washington's Herbie (Biff) Jones and Chicago's Johnny Bratton.

Hearing that Bratton wanted to pull out of the fight, Heinie Miller, chairman of the D. C. board called Sheldon Clark, chairman of the Illinois group. Clark immediately summoned Howard Frazier, Bratton's manager, and warned him that failure to go through with the Griffith Stadium fight would mean suspension for him and his fighter in all NBA States.

Frazier reconsidered and promised faithfully that he and Bratton would be in Washington at least five days before the battle.

Earlier in the day, Frazier called Menendez, the Turner Arena matchmaker, and asked to be released from the contract. Frazier claimed, among other things:

Look at These Excuses

(1) Bratton had a sore hand; (2) the fight would not draw in Washington and (3) Bratton had been signed to meet the winner of the Ike William-Bob Montgomery lightweight title fight.

Menendez, looking forward to his first payday since May 26 when he cashed in one the Smuggy Hursey-Bee Bee Washington skirmish, said no, but emphatically, and took his troubles to the District Boxing Commission offices.

Thereupon, Miller talked with Clark and the latter warned Frazier to go through with the match or suffer the consequences.

Later in the day, Miller also called Frazier and got additional assurance from Bratton's manager that everything was hunky-dory once more.

Jones No Easy Thing

When the eighth-ranking Bratton accepted the match with Jones, whom the NBA recently placed on their "honorable mention" rating list, he thought he had an easy touch.

But Bratton saw Jones stop Johnnie Nichols in one round in the semiwindup to the Zale-Graziano scrap last week and evidently became a little uneasy. It was Jones' fourth straight kayo victory.

Furthermore, the Bratton-Frazier combine, wanted the fight transferred to Chicago as Jones clicked with Windy City patrons. In Chicago, where Bratton is a red-hot article, the fight would probably draw a $65,000 house.

Old Billy Gibson, Manager of Tunney, Leonard, Just Goes to Sleep

By Sid Feder

New York, July 21 (AP).—They found Old Billy Gibson, a fast man with a buck, dead in his hotel room today. He just fell asleep and never woke up.

Old Billy, you may remember, managed Benny Leonard and Gene Tunney when he was flying high around here in a camel hair coat, in the twenties, always tossing money around, always smiling.

Probably no other fight manager ever had a record like that—two world champions who retired undefeated.

Yet, Old Billy was the first to admit he didn't know a thing about fighting—was far more interested in his first love, horses.

"If you want the breeding of anything in the fifth at Jamaica," he'd tell sports writers, "I'll give it to you—like that. But fighters—I just manage them. They think and fight for themselves."

Yet, he made a million dollars with Leonard and he made another bankroll with Tunney. And he was a high-roller—a big action man—in his racetrack bookmaking days before he managed fighters. He'd take any size bet.

But he was so quick with a dollar that he gave away all of it that was loose. Some friends made him buy some annuities to carry him these last few years, until he died today at 71. He was the easiest kind of a mark for a touch. He'd bankroll financially ailing bookies and he'd contribute to any charity.

"If Billy had $100,000,000, he'd have died broke," Dumb Dan Morgan, one of his fight-managing contemporaries, remarked.

Oddly enough, Leonard was his first fighter—and Benny, himself, died only three months ago. They were like father and son—that close.

Billy wasn't interested in fights or fighters, but his friends, Tom McArdle, who used to be matchmaker for Madison Square Garden, and Lou Brix, who later managed Featherweight Champion Sixto Escobar, were. Tom interested him in opening the old Fairmount A. C. in a foundry high in the Bronx as a fight club.

They used to tell the story that Billy discovered Leonard one night when Benny, as a kid, was sneaking a look at the fights through the skylight of the Fairmount and the skylight gave way and dumped him plop in the middle of the ring. All hands denied it, though.

Billy got to manage Tunney shortly after Gene's return from the armed forces about 1920. Frank Bagley was Gene's manager then, but he and Gene weren't getting along too well, so Billy took over the contract and Bagley was paid off.

The son of a Bronx butcher, Billy was known all over New York. He ran the Criterion cafe, a famous eating and drinking and gathering place in the Bronx, and judges and lawyers and politicians and fighters and newspapermen and showpeople were steady visitors. Billy made book there, too.

One day, his pal, Chief Police Surgeon Edward T. Higgins came in and gave him a heavyweight. It turned out to be Jim Coffey, the famous Dublin giant. They still sit far into the night to tell tall tales about Jim.

Once any one of Coffey's fights started, Billy could never get into the corner himself. It seems, there are 32 counties in Ireland, and each one of the 32 had a representative at ringside who figured it was his duty to the Old Sod to leave his seat and climb into Coffey's corner to show the Dublin giant how to fight.

Then one night Old Billy matched Jim and Frank Moran, in the old Madison Square Garden, who was a handy man with his fists in those days. There was so much excitement through the first two rounds, Billy couldn't get near the corner because of the 32 counties. Then in the third, Frank hit Coffey with two right hands and the Dublin giant went quietly to sleep.

"You'd think the big wind from Ireland hit that corner," Billy laughed later. "The whole 32 counties just put their heads down and left without a by-your-leave."

They'll be burying Old Billy after funeral services at Kinsley Hunter's parlor in the Bronx and a mass at St. Jerome's Church. He hadn't been around much these last 15 years. He'd begun to run down after the death of his wife in 1926, and in 1928 the New York Supreme Court ruled that this loss had affected his mind.

At that time, the record said that virtually all of his holdings had disappeared. That, mind you, was only a year after he'd received the usual 33 per cent of Tunney's end of the second Dempsey fight—some $300,000. He was that fast with a buck.

AT CHARLES TOWN

Dear Folks:

When Walter Haight, the horse, won yesterday's third race, it was the first time in six years of racing that he has been successful as a favorite, and I picked him. Johnny Tammaro put up a perfect ride on the little rascal. The Tuesday program here is the final of the long 48-day meeting and the card includes President A. J. Boyle's pet race, "The Go-away Happy" Purse. The $1300 purse money is the highest for a race here and all eight starters get part, the out of the money nags taking down $100 each. The day's feature is the Finale Purse, at a mile and a sixteenth and will bring a clash of Sure Gift, Unheard, Phoness, Woodscott and other good ones. Val Victory, claimed by Wayne Kendrick last Saturday, was the only horse to win five races during this meeting. This horse was once sold for $200 because he was broken down in three legs. They are still talking about Black Bass, an 11-year-old maiden, winning here last week-end. Bel Air opens its 10-day meeting on Wednesday. The B. & O. Railroad will run a special train from Washington. Many of the horses, not in tomorrow's entries, were shipped out tonight for the Maryland oval. Watch my selections. I believe I have some get-away day specials. See you on the rail.

Mike Joseph Touting Smaller Midget Cars

Mike Joseph, president of the American Racing Drivers' Circuit, which has sanctioned the 50-event Eastern States championship midget auto race card at the West Lanham, Md., Speedway Friday night, gives the Ford V-8 drivers a strong chance of outlasting the more powerful Offenhausers.

Joseph is second only to Ed "Dutch" Schaefer in points scored at Lanham, and will made a strong bid for the prize money in a V-8.

9-Year-Old Looter 2d; Flamare 3d

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., July 21. Jockey Jimmy Baird, leading rider at the meeting, put up one of his copyrighted finishes aboard the Stevens Stable's Asaider to win by a neck margin in the sixth race, best offering of a featureless program.

Baird got the three-year-old up in the final jump to hang defeat on the 9-year-old Looter. Three lengths back came H. L. Donovan's Flamare to be third in a starting field of eight.

Asaider, hemmed in along the rail when beaten by Fall Guy in a recent start, returned a $9.80 mutuel and was clocked in 1:16 3-5 for the six furlongs, plus 120 feet.

The track was in good condition for the race. Heavy rains were reported in nearby areas but the oval escaped a downpour.

Going Away at the Finish

Jockey Stanley Austin took Looter to the front at the break and the veteran shook off Idaho Maid and Patrician going to the first turn. Free Valley, winner of two races here, tried to get to the leader but failed and weakened.

Approaching the stretch, Asaider began to move. Flamare, always within striking distance, also rallied. In the final drive, Austin did everything known to jockeys to keep Looter in front but Asaider gradually came to her rival and was going away at the end.

The fifth race, another purse affair, went to Mrs. J. Sturgeon 3d's Talcum Spray, the filly winning by five lengths while under the handling of Jockey Ray Arduini of Washington.

G. A. Lawson's Fall Guy finished second ahead of J. A. Mullineaux's Roving Moose. The winner returned a $5.80 mutuel and was clocked in :50 for the about 4½ furlongs.

Two Winners for Tammaro

Jockey Johnny Tammaro rode two winners on the card. The Baltimore boy scored with I. G. Schmorsch's Kapmec, a $15 shot in the second race, to put the finishing touches on a $38.40 daily double started when Mrs. V. M. Smith's Kid O'Sullivan got up to take a photo victory at $4.80 in the first race.

Tammaro came back in the third to win with Stanley Greene, jr.'s Walter Haight, the 8-year-old coming from behind to score as a $5.80 favorite.

Jockey Ray Arduini of Washington suffered a wrenched shoulder when his mount, Our Bid, tripped and fell at the far turn in the eighth race. The event was won by H. W. Shaffer's St. Lo, paying $11.60. This was the third winner for Baird who, in addition to winning with Asaider, also took the seventh with Valdin Bina at $7.80.

Braves Edge Yankees, 4-3, Before 12,000 at Cooperstown

Cooperstown, N. Y., July 21 (AP).—The Boston Braves nosed out the New York Yankees, 4-3, in 10 innings today before a crowd estimated at 12,000 in the sixth annual major league exhibition game played at Doubleday Field.

Bama Rowell's single, a sacrifice by Danny Lithwiler and a wild throw by Third Baseman Al Lyons, permitting Rowell to score from second base, provided the winning margin for Reliefer Ed Wright in the first overtime inning after the Yanks had tied the score with two in the last of the ninth.

Homers by the Yanks, Johnny Lindell in the fourth off Starter Ernie White and by Boston's Johnny Hopp off Loser Don Johnson in the fifth, each with nobody on base, featured the contest.

Piedmont Loop Crowds Off but Richmond Gains

Richmond, Va., July 21 (AP).—The chances of the Class B Piedmont League's shattering or matching last year's attendance mark during 1947 appeared slim today as a survey of the six clubs indicated a grand total of only 443,222 customers.

The seacon was almost two-thirds over, and the paid admissions—443,222— were more than 100,000 short of the 1946 pace.

The Richmond Colts, currently stumbling around in third place, already have topped the 100,000 figure in their first 40 home contests, an average of approximately 2500 fans each game. During all of the 1946 drive, the Colts played before only 96,200.

Frick Pondering Disputed 'Homer'

New York, July 21 (AP).—National League President Ford Frick's decision on the disputed home ru in yesterday's Brooklyn-St. Louis baseball game will not be made until later in the week, his office said yesterday. Frick and his aids attended yesterday's annual ceremonies at Cooperstown, N. Y.

St. Louis Manager Eddie Dyer protested yesterday when Don Northey, Cardinal outfielder, said Umpire Beans Reardon slowed him down as he rounded second base on what appeared to be a home run.

However, the ball struck the top of the stands and bounced back into the field of play. Northey was tagged out at the plate. Reardon said only, "I'll let Mr. Frick answer."

Knights' Show One of Best

Local sports followers, who have anxiously awaited the renewal of the Knights of Columbus Horse Show, which will be held Saturday at the Meadowbrook Show Grounds, Chevy Chase, should witness some spirited contests.

Although entries do not officially close until midnight Wednesday, the owners of 65 hunters, jumpers and saddle horses have already posted their entries, according to Vincent P. Lester, show secretary.

The Columbus event, long recognized as one of the better shows in the East, will be the only major show in this area this season, if the officials of the Inter-American do not decide to renew their classic.

90% of Autos Need New Try At Tests in Va.

The old jalopy is still in good enough shape to pass the current Virginia State safety inspection, but only after it has had some minor repairs or adjustments.

Incomplete statistics compiled at State police headquarters in Richmond indicate that approximately 90 per cent of the vehicles checked since inspections began July 1 could be approved only after some work was done on them.

That, also, is the picture in the city of Alexandria and in Arlington Fairfax counties, telephone suvey yesterday revealed.

The prospects are for the highest rate of initial rejections in the history of State inspections. The current inspection is the first since wartime conditions forced a suspension some five years ago. There are 500,000 automobiles in Virginia.

In Alexandria, for instance, Joseph Caporletti, a partner in the Temple Motor Co., 1810 King st., said that 80 per cent of the automobiles inspected in his shop needed repairs of one kind or another before he could pass them. Twenty cars daily, on an average, are checked by his mechanics.

Inspectors at Hawkins Motor Co., Inc., of 2501 Columbia pike, Arlington, find that "almost 100 per cent of the cars need their lights adjusted, at least," and that the "steering and front end cause a lot of trouble, too."

At Arlington Motors, Inc., 1917 N. Moore st., Arlington, J. H. Nuttycombe said approximately 90 per cent were in need of adjustments or repairs of one kind or another. He estimated that 30 per cent of the 25 cars checked daily at Arlington Motors are rejected.

It's pretty much the same story in Fairfax County. A spokesman at White Motors, in Fairfax, said "a good 90 per cent of the automobiles need some work, mostly minor." Nearly every car passes eventually, however.

Dorco Union Ruled Cambridge Plant Bargaining Agent

Baltimore, July 21 (AP).—The Dorco Workers Union, Inc., has been certified as the collective bargaining agent for the 2056 eligible employes of the Phillips Packing Co. of Cambridge, Md., the regional office of the National Labor Relations Board announced today.

The board said a tally of an April 30 election showed 844 voted for the Dorca union, 602 votes for the Food, Tobacco and Agricultural Workers of America (CIO), which had asked the election. 37 votes against both organizations and 48 challenge ballots.

The CIO union filed objections to the election, the NLRB said, which were overruled by the regional director of the Government agency. The FTAAW then took the case to the national board.

ABOUT THE PRICE OF MEAT

Less than a Penny a Day

This is what the meat packing industry earns, after all expenses, for providing meat for an average American family of four—less than 7¢ a week.

For this net profit the industry—

Buys livestock and pays out millions of dollars daily for it.

Operates plants, machinery and equipment (employing over a quarter million people).

Prepares fresh meat, ham, bacon, sausage, canned meats, etc.

Delivers meat, under refrigeration, a few blocks or a thousand miles, to your store.

Over a period of years, whether meat prices were up or down, the earnings for these services have had no appreciable effect on the price you pay for a pound of meat.

Meat prices, whether up or down, are determined by competition. Just as the more than 4,000 separate meat packing companies compete with each other in buying livestock and selling meat . . . so millions of shoppers select meat daily from the available supply.

And at retail, when meat cuts are in large supply, prices are lower than when they are in limited supply. The supply of one meat or another may change greatly from week to week or season to season. This results in meat prices going up or down.

3-Man Board Gets Reports On Cheltenham

Baltimore, July 21 (AP).—Reports of Cheltenham School for Boys staff members on conditions at the Negro training school were turned over today to a special three-man committee of the institution's board of managers.

The written reports, assembled by H. R. Harris, acting superintendent of Cheltenham, were given to the committee at a board meeting without discussion of their contents.

Thomas B. Sprague, board president, called for the reports after he found what he said were "intolerably filthy" conditions in some of the Cheltenham cottages and evidences that some of the inmates had been whipped.

Sprague paid a surprise visit to Cheltenham July 11.

Members of the special committee are Howard C. Hill, Dr. Robert L. Jackson and J. Marshall Stewart, all of Baltimore.

The committee will report back to the board at its next meeting August 5.

The committee also was delegated to initiate preparation of a printed manual of regulations for guidance of the Cheltenham staff.

Appointment of a permanent superintendent for the institution was deferred until the next board meeting. The post has been vacant for more than six months, and board members have been looking over the qualifications of the five men on the recently certified eligible list.

Bill to Let Navy Buy California Hotel Is Cleared

By The Associated Press

The House Rules Committee yesterday cleared for House debate a bill authorizing the Navy to purchase the Del Monte Hotel at Monterey, Calif., for a naval postgraduate school.

The bill would authorize the expenditure of $2,500,000 to purchase the hotel and adjoining school and equip the school to accommodate 500 naval line officers.

The Rules Committee approved procedure calling for one hour general debate in the House. No date was set for the debate.

The bill, by Representative Jack Z. Anderson (R., Calif.), was held up three times in the committee but brought up again at Anderson's request.

House Overcomes Southerners To Pass Anti-Poll-Tax Bill

332 million dollars provided by the House for foreign famine relief.

2. The House approved a conference compromise on the Interior Department bill providing $194,587,859 for the agency. The President asked $296,135,420 but the House had cut that to $161,413,512. The Senate raised the total to $215,055,353, restoring most of the reclamation cuts. The compromise was reached after weeks of controversy.

With eight other appropriation bills still unpassed, money measures remain the real key to adjournment, leaders insisted they could clear all by Saturday.

Adjournment Form Debated

A House-Senate leadership huddle later this week will determine what form the adjournment will take. Republican sentiment appeared swingingtoward a resolution that would give congressional leaders authority to call Congress back if they chose. The President already has authority under the Conctitution to reconvene Congress.

As the adjournment race started, Senator Carl A. Hatch (D., N. Mex.) chided Republican leaders for leaving many major measures hanging fire. Before going on vacation, he demanded Congress pass legislation admitting displaced persons, giving the RFC authority to guarantee veterans home loans, and eliminating language in the Taft-Hartley bill that he said would curb freedom of the press for union and other newspapers.

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) agreed Congress should "finish the people's business" before adjourning.

To pass the antipoll tax bill and send it to the Senate, House Republicans had to ride out a Southern filibuster. Southern Democrats used every delaying tactic, including an unsuccessful motion to adjourn.

Previous Bills Failed

In the end, 73 Democratics and one American Laborite (Marcantonio of New York) joined 216 Republicans for the bill. Ninety-eight Democrats and 15 Republicans voted against it.

The legislation makes it unlawful for any State or municipality to require payment of a poll tax as a prerequisite for voting in any primary or general election for Federal office.

These seven States still have poll tax laws—Virginia, Texas, Mississippi, Tennessee, South Carolina, Alabama and Arkansas.

Three prior House bills, in 1942, 1943 and 1945, abolishing the poll tax in Federal elections, all died in the Senate, each by the filibuster route.

Labor Surplus of 17,825 Due In 9 Virginia Areas by Aug. 1

Richmond, Va., July 21 (AP).—The Virginia State Employment Service announced today that a numerical surplus of 17,825 workers is expecteed in nine major employment areas in the Old Dominion by August 1. In addition, a surplus of 3700 was predicted for three other areas by September 1.

In Alexandria, Arlington, Fairfax and part of Prince William County a worker surplus of about 250 is predicted. In that area, continuing heavy demands for workers in the construction industry have created a shortage of skilled labor.

In the Norfolk area, the employment service reported, the largest surplus is expected and probably will total about 5000 of which 4200 are men and 800 women.

"Anticipated employment expansion in Norfolk, Portsmouth and contiguous counties did not materialize during the past 60 days and instead a decline of approximately one per cent is noted in total personnel of firms reporting to the employment service," the USES survey stated.

Shortage of materials, which closed several plants and cut the work-week of others, contributed materially to this retirement. Labor disputes in the building material industry, scarcity of steel and cancellation of Government contracts precluded expected gains in construction employment. Workers released from governmental establishments also exceeded previous estimations.

The area includes the cities of Norfolk, Portsmouth, South Norfolk and the counties of Norfolk and Princess Anne with an estimated population of 365,000.

Girl, 14, Is Victim Of Sex Slaying— Just as Predicted

Houghton, Mich., July 21 (U.P.).—Sheriff's deputies tonight questioned the "numerous" boy friends of pretty Aurelia Vertanen, 14, a "problem child" who died as her parents had been warned she might—as the victim of a sex-slaying.

Sheriff Emil J. Schumacher said: "We picked her up a half dozen times when she ran away from home. We warned both her and her parents that something like this might happen if she kept it up, but she wouldn't listen to anybody."

House Approves Bill To Boost U. S. Pensions

SPEED: The House yesterday took action on these Federal worker bills:

Kluttz

1. Gave its unanimous approval to the Stevenson compromise retirement bill to raise pensions of retired employes, to provide benefits for widows, and to otherwise liberalize the Civil Service system.

2. Okayed the Rees bill to give greater job security to career employes and veterans. The bill provides that no career employe is to be released in a reduction of force if he's qualified to fill a job within his agency that is held by either a war service or temporary employe. The bill also would abolish the retention points for efficiency ratings.

3. Approved another Rees bill to raise from $10,000 to $15,000 a year the salaries of 45 top-flight civilian scientists, 30 in the Army and 15 in the Navy.

4. Voted approval of the St. George bill to give veteran preferences to widowed mothers of men who were killed in the military service.

5. Approved the Sadlack bill to give compensatory time off to postal supervisors for overtime work. This and the four above bills were all sent to the Senate.

6. The Senate-approved Hagen bill to authorize the Census Bureau to collect statistics on cottonseed and its products was passed and sent to the White House. This bill will require Census to add a few more jobs.

7. The Twyman bill to provide for a census of manufacturers and transportation concerns was again passed over in the House. If approved before Congress recesses, it would add several thousand jobs in Census.

8. The Blackney bill to raise the salaries of physicians and surgeons in the Army, Navy, and Public Health Service also failed to get unanimous consent required for approval.

9. Also sidetracked was the Welch bill established a national minerals resources division within the Interior Department.

RETIREMENT: The Stevenson retirement bill was passed under a suspension of House rules in about 10 minutes flat. No one objected to the measure and there was no need for debate on it. Chairman Rees (R., Kan.) of the House Civil Service Committee and Representative Stevenson (R., Wis.) each took a few minutes to explain the legislation. Afterward, half a dozen members got up to commend them for writing the bill.

The bill, which was explained in this column in detail last Sunday, would increase pensions of those employes who would retire under it from 5 to 25 per cent, abolish the so-called "tontine" charge against employes, and allow any employe who leaves the service after less than 10 years to withdraw his money from the retirement system. Also, the employe contribution to the fund would be increased from 5 to 6 per cent. The bill now goes to the Senate.

CAREER: The bill to give greater job protection to career employes and veterans was adopted after Chairman Rees accused Federal executives of violating the law to keep favorite war service people. He denounced this system as a "personal patronage system" which he said leads to poor morale among the career and veteran groups.

His bill also would abolish retention points based on efficiency ratings which are: 5 points for excellent; 3 points for very good, and 1 point for good. It, too, was sent to the Senate.

VETERANS: Along this line, a group of career veterans who have been laid off yesterday announced the formation of a committee to fight for the enforcement of veterans-preference laws by the Government.

The group is composed mainly of 57 career veterans who have been ordered fired from the Office of the Housing Expediter. However, it wants to contact other career veterans who have been laid off by the economy wave.

Committee members are Maxwell Harway, Warren Looney, Lester Klepper, Garland Conley and James George. Harway, the chairman, lives at 8716 Colesville rd., Silver Spring, Md.

GAO: Another large-scale downgrading will hit the General Account Office staff. About 300 employes in its audit division will be given notices of lower grades Thursday. The notices are due to become effective on August 24.

Another 50 employes in the Claims Division have been given lay-off notices.

12 Candidates Reinstated In Arlington

District Committee Indorses Blackball Of Six Democrats By County Group

Virginia's Eighth Congressional District Democratic Committee yesterday overrode the Arlington County Democratic Executive Committee's action in disqualifying 18 candidates for the county committee.

In subsequent action, however, the district committee disqualified the candidacies of six of the 18 and certified the other 2 for position on the county ballot.

The larger body, which serves as an appeals board for county and city committee action of the party, ruled, in effect, that failure of candidates to appear before an investigative committee of the county committee was not proper basis for disqualification.

The district committee, at the same meeting, upheld the disqualification of Robert C. Davenport, candidate for the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors from Mount Vernon magisterial district. Davenport's disqualification was based on his alleged failure to sign an allegiance pledge for party candidates in time.

Candidates Reinstated

Arlington candidates reinstated were:

H. Smith Rucker, Harold L. Schilz, Irving Hoddes, Albert A. Carretta, James D. Franklin, Carl T. Sanderhoff, Vincent Tramonte, Mrs. Joseph Y. Barber, Edward H. Bahn, Mrs. Martha P. Wildhack, Mrs. Virginia W. Thatcher, Mrs. Beatrice B. Smythe.

Names of all but two of the 18 were ordered stricken from the candidates' list by the county executive committee when they declined to testify on their qualifications before a special investigating group of the county committee. The remaining two were ordered disqualified on their own testimony.

District Committee Chairman Gardner L. Boothe said every person was restored to the list whose papers were in order, who had agreed to support all Democratic candidates and who had voted a straight party ticket at the last general election

The committee said it disqualified William S. Tickle because he had not voted for Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) in the last election; Ellsworth H. Mosher because he was not a registered voter when he filed; Lawrence S. Knappen because he failed to appeal; and Mrs. Elizabeth W. White, Mrs Esther I. Cooper and Perry Gawen because they had voted for Dan Dugan, an independent, in the last county board election.

33 "Unknowns" a Problem

Reason for the rumpus in Arlington was an investigation of candidates for the executive committee carried on during the past two weeks by a five-man subcommittee of the present executive committee.

An all-time high of 56 persons filed for the 33 seats on the committee, creating, in the words of subcommittee chairman Harry A. Grant, "a novel situation."

Grant said that of this number, 33 were unknown to the executive committee. An investigation was held to determine if they were actually Democrats. Sixteen of those disqualified did not attend the investigation when called.

Those who stayed away gave as their reasons that they had received only a few hours' notice, or that the request to be present had not been signed, or that they felt such action by the executive committee to be unauthorized.

Arlington attorney Frank L. Ball, speaking for H. Smith Rucker, said the county committee's investigation was the worst possible thing that could happen o he party. He said that if condoned by the district committee it would drive many Democrats into the Republican camp.

Baltimore Speeds Scout Camp Work

Baltimore, July 21 (AP).—Boy Scouts in the Baltimore area have been roughing it this summer, but officials promised today the development of four training camps covering 2500 acres is being pushed as rapidly as possible.

Boy Scout Executive H. H. Heistand reported the camp sites acquired last year were used this summer, but improvements were lacking.

Work at present is being concentrated on construction of a dam on Broad Creek in a 1000-acre camp in Harford County. It will create a lake 55 acres in extent with an average depth of five feet.

Other camp sites being developed are 75 acres in Union Mills, Carroll County, 110 acres on the Gunpowder at the confluence of Long Green Branch, and 800 acres in Washington and Allegany Counties.

Civic Leaders Urge Elected D. C. Council

House Committee Witnesses Differ on Method of Choosing Other City Officials

Washington civic leaders yesterday made strong new appeals to Congress for home rule.

They urged that the city be run by an elected council, but differed on whether other city officials should be elected or appointed.

The witnesses included Wilbur S. Finch and Kenneth P. Armstrong, representing the Federation of Citizens Associations, and Woolsey W. Hall of the Federation of Civic Associations. The three are officials of the Central Suffrage Conference. They testified to the House Subcommittee on District reorganization and home rule.

Agree on City Manager

All three agreed that the proposed elected city council should turn over city executive duties to a city manager.

Finch and Armstrong said that, aside from the city council and an elected autonomous school board, other city officials should be appointed.

Hall said that under home rule the people should elect their collector of taxes, and judges of both Municipal Court and the Municipal Court of Appeals. He agreed that the Board of Education also should be elected.

All three said that if the District gets home rule it should have its own complete system of courts to handle local cases. These cases are now divided between the Municipal and the District courts.

Representation Wanted, Too

Armstrong told the committee the Central Suffrage Conference wanted to see both home rule and representation for the District in Congress and in presidential elections. But he said it was "absurd" to argue that the District should have no home rule without representation in the Congress.

"National representation is by no means the first essential, nor is it a substitute for home rule," said Armstrong.

In discussion with Subcommittee Staff Director George Galloway, Finch declared at least a part of the proposed city council should be elected to represent the whole city, rather than separate wards.

He said it would be up to Congress to say whether Federal representatives should sit in the council, and whether they should come from Congress or represent the Federal executive branch.

Suggests Solution

Finch said one solution would be to assign the chairmen of Congress' District Committee to serve on the city council. He said, too, that Congress should reserve a veto power over city council actions.

Finch's suggestion that the District should have authority to borrow from the Federal Government for city building was challenged by committee members

Chairman James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.) and Representative Homer R. Jones (R., Wash.) suggested the District under home rule should float its own loans instead of borrowing Federal funds.

The subcommittee also heard Hall sharply criticize the District Commissioners for failure to appoint a Negro to membership on the city library board He said that three Negroes serve on the school board, but none on the library board.

Leahy States Chest Survey Job Is Done

The three-way, divergent and conflicting findings of the Citizens' Community Chest Survey Committee no longer concern that group and must be resolved by the Community Chest organization itself.

William E. Leahy, prominent attorney and chairman of the committee, stated this yesterday. He said the committee adjourned last Friday when it completed its reports and issued a majority and two minority decisions. Any further action, he said, is up to the Chest.

Members of the executive committee of the Chest's board of trustees are scheduled to meet tonight to consider the reports.

A majority report of 15 members of the 25-member committee recommended closer integration of the Chest with the Council of Social Agencies, whose member groups outnumber the Community Chest.

Three of these signers, however, later withdrew to join four others who had prepared a minority report that the study and recommendations only confused and discredited Chest and Social Agency functions here.

A second minority report, signed by six committee members, proposed discontinuance of the Council as a member of the Community Chest.

The committee survey was instituted following release of a controversial report of survey on race relations in Washington which was sponsored by the Council of Social Agencies. The race relations study was one of 18 surveys sponsored by the Council on health, welfare and recreation problems of the Greater Washington area.

$95,504,737 D. C. Budget Submitted by Conferees

Senate and House Expected to Clear Money Bill Today

Washington's budget this year will be $95,504,737, a Capitol conference committee agreed yesterday.

The revised District money bill is slated to get final approval in both Houses today and a quick trip to the White House, members said.

The conference agreement split the million dollar difference between the earlier House and Senate versions of the budget bill.

It added $557,233 to the Senate total, leaving the bill $425,573 below the House figure.

Record-Breaking Level

The decision left the city's appropriation at a new record-breaking level, $9,802,389.84 more than the city had for the fiscal year which ended June 30.

To help pay the cost, the bill carries a 12-million-dollar Federal grant to the District, compared with eight million last year. Another big slice of the increase will be paid by the boost in city taxes which recently became law.

Representative Walt Horan (R., Wash.) is slated to present the revised budget plan to the House. Senator Henry C. Dworshak will handle it in the Senate. They head the Capitol's District Appropriations Subcommittees.

$42,000 Cut Restored

Major decisions in yesterday's conference included:

1. Return to the bill of $42,000 for Health Department operating expenses. The money was clipped off in the Senate. The decision leaves the department's operating budget at $2,042,000. It includes money for the District's mass tuberculosis case-finding survey, a cancer control project here, and funds to convert the old Gales School to a health clinic.

2. A $285,000 Senate cut in street building funds was restored, along with $250,000 of a $431,000 Senate reduction in sewer construction money.

3. A compromise plan to restrict use of Washington child day care centers to children whose families have total income of $2600 or less was adopted. The House earlier voted a $2000 family income limit, and the Senate erased the income limit entirely.

4. A $3600 item to pay the salary of Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox as District National Guard Commander was put back in the bill. The Senate had knocked it out on the ground that no law was on the books to authorize it.

5. Compromise language was put in the bill to insure that city health and welfare funds are audited by the District auditor before payment. A House section had called for this type of pre-audit for all money in the bill. The Senate had knocked it out. Officials said the compromise follows present auditing practice.

Other Items Restored

Other items trimmed in the Senate and restored by the conference group included $5400 for the corporation counsel's office, $4100 for the auditor's office, $1700 for the Department of Weights and Measures, $7000 for the Zoning Commission, and $7300 for welfare institutions.

On three items, where the Senate had hiked House money grants, the conference group trimmed the increase down. It knocked out all but $5000 of a $38,884 Senate boost in welfare administration funds. It cut $12,500 of a $12,000 increase for the Recorder of Deeds, and $2423 of an $11,800 increase for the office of people's counsel in the Public Utilities Commission.

The last decision left funds to continue the people's counsel job, now held by John O'Dea.

Major appropriations now carried in the bill include $24,033,650 for schools, $6,084,000 for police, $3,759,000 for the fire department, $2,300,000 for police and firemen's relief, $7,857,000 for the health department and city hospitals; and $11,481,300 for welfare of which $6,229,000 is for the District's payment to St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Police Widen Search For Taxicab Slayer

Phoebus, Va., July 21 (AP).—State and Tidewater police, admittedly at a loss to explain what they termed an apparently motiveless killing, broadened their search today for the slayer of Ira Dermont Boone, 22-year-old taxi driver whose bullet-punctured body was found slumped in a ditch in north Hampton Sunday morning.

Police said all of Boone's valuables were intact, eliminating robbery as a possible motive for the shooting.

Emergency Fund to Provide Welfare Checks This Week

Public assistance checks held up while Congress considers the District budget will be mailed out from an emergency fund this week, probably tomorrow.

District Auditor A. R. Pilkerton yesterday signed a requisition for $95,000 from Federal Security funds. When the requisition clears the Treasury Department and the General Accounting Office, the checks, already made out, will be released, he said.

The routing of the requisition should be completed in time to send the checks out tomorrow, Pilkerton said.

Raymond Clapp, principal assistant director of public welfare, explained that the money was made available after the Welfare Department exhausted $200,000 of a special appropriation. When Congress approves the District budget an adjustment will have to be made with Federal Security, Clapp said.

The checks are expected to bring relief to private Washington charity groups which have been trying to aid the needy while the Welfare Department has been without funds.

Since July 1 about a dozen persons eligible for public aid have been turned away each day because the Welfare Department had no money, Clapp said.

The $200,000 appropriation, he said, had made it possible for the Welfare Department to send checks on July 11 to persons who were on assistance rolls before July 1.

Persons applying since July 1 have been investigated and placed on eligibility lists. Those persons will receive aid from the $95,000 fund, Clapp said.

William O. Tufts, chairman of the Community Chest's budget committee, said the private charity organizations while doing their best to aid these persons, do not have sufficient funds for such a large undertaking.

Mrs. Mildred Kilinski, director of the Family Service Association, a Chest agency, said as many as 35 requests a day for aid have been received since July 1. The agency has been putting out money for food on a loan basis. Persons who received checks July 11 have for the most part already repaid the loans, she said.

Resent 'Kicks', Sales Tax Foe Urges Business

Maryland Economic Council Head Calls For Political Action

Maryland businessmen must organize for effective political action to avoid "getting kicked around," Robert I. Black, president of the Maryland Economic Council, Inc., which is fighting the State sales tax, declared yesterday.

Black, who lives in Norbeck, Md., said that "business found out at Annapolis that it wasn't organized" when merchants tried to oppose enactment of the sales tax.

"Other groups could punish legislators at the polls," he declared, "but generally businessmen are not interested in politics. They've got to begin taking an interest in these affairs."

Businessmen should ask candidates "whether they will help us and whether they will not kick us around," Black, a Washington public relations man with business interests in Montgomery County, said.

He said his organization would "probably prepare lists of those who voted for and against the sales tax" before the next election.

Members of the council include both Democrats and Republicans, Black explained.

The council's current report warned that "if necessary, the council in the future will be in a position to insure election of members of the General Assembly and other public officials on a nonpartisan basis sympathetic to business."

At present, the council is awaiting the outcome of a suit before the Maryland Court of Appeals on its request for a referendum on the tax, Black said.

Other officers of the organization are Alfred Truitt of Salisbury, vice president; and William H. Prescott, real estate dealer of 8015 Wisconsin ave., Bethesda, secretary-treasurer.

Meanwhile, the Washington Board of Trade announced yesterday that Walter E. Kennedy, chief of the Retail Sales Tax Division, would be at the borad's offices in the Star Building today at 10 a. m. for individual conferences with merchants in the Greater Washington area.

Hearing Set in Killing Following Card Game

Martinsville, Va., July 21 (AP).—A preliminary hearing will be held at Stuart on Saturday for Dan Foley, 55-year-old Buffalo Ridge farmer, who has been charged with murder in the fatal shooting early Sunday of William Eugene Turner, 28-year-old employee of the Bassett Furniture Co.

Commonwealth's Attorney F. P. Burton said the shooting followed an argument between Foley and game. He said others in the card game fled when the altercation began.

Plank Case Suspect Faces New Charge

Taunton, Mass. Man Pleads Guilty to Automobile Theft

Alvah B. Martin, still facing a possible charge of murder in the fatal shooting of Norman Leroy Plank on July 6, was indicted by a Fairfax County grand jury on a charge of auto theft yesterday.

Arraigned before Judge Paul E. Brown of Fairfax Circuit Court immediately following the grand jury charge, Martin pleaded guilty and then expressed relief when Judge Brown deferred sentence until September 12 pending a study of the case by the county probation officer.

"I thought sure I'd be given some time right then," Martin told a reporter following his arraignment. He said he knew that he still faces a possible murder charge in the Plank slaying.

The indictment charged Martin, who is from Taunton, Mass., with the theft of an auto owned by Plank's sister, Mrs. Nellie Burrer, which was reported missing the day after the District Small Claims Court clerk was found dead at the Burrer home in Chesterbrook Woods. The suspect, who has freely admitted the theft, insists he stole the auto the night of July 5, more than 24 hours before Plank's death.

Although Martin has been described as the only suspect in the slaying, police have not formally charged him with murder because they still are not certain they have sufficient evidence to link him to the crime. He has admitted being with the victim the day before his death and, although accounts of his actions after that have been vague, he has rigidly adhered to the story that he last saw Plank the day before the shooting.

Lieut. Henry Magarity, chief of the Fairfax detective bureau, said Martin may be brought to Washington today in an effort to identify some of the places he claims he visited around the time of the Plank death. Unable to furnish police with any addresses, he maintains he spent part of one night at a downtown hotel and visited a number of taverns during an alcohol-fogged weekend.

Lieutenant Magarity said police will have to get permission from Judge Brown to bring Martin out of the State. He said he intends to confer with Brown this morning, and if permission is granted, the suspect probably will be brought to the District late this afternoon.

100 Montgomery Taxi Drivers Protest New Rate Ordinance

More than 100 Bethesda and Takoma Park taxicab drivers will appear in a delegation today before the Montgomery County Commissioners to protest the county's new taxicab ordinance.

James H. Pugh, attorney for four Bethesda cab firms, said the protesting drivers work for the Suburban, We, Community and Bethesda cab firms.

Frank Neff, secretary-treasurer of the Takoma Park Taxi Service, said an undetermined number of the firm's 22 drivers will join in the protest.

Principal complaint of the Bethesda operators, Pugh said, is the new 25-cent fare in the Bethesda commercial district, which his clients feel is not enough for them to make a profit.

Neff said the Takoma Park firm will call for a reduction in the $50 license fee for cabs, because existing insurance rates are "exorbitant" and State and town taxes are already required.

CHASING TRAFFIC VIOLATOR—Motor Patrolman J. E. Slattery, standing behind tow truck removing machine, was injured slightly late yesterday when he collided with an automobile while chasing a motorist who had driven through two red lights

Police Catch One Man After Chase, Lose 2

The chase and capture of a Virginian accused of speeding; an unsuccessful chase in Maryland; three traffic accidents within the District, and a crackdown by the Hyattsville Police Court on reckless driving highlighted yesterday's traffic calendar for the greater Washington area.

Thomas R. Weaver, 36, of Dunn Loring, Va., was placed under $1000 bond for a further hearing on August 6, as the driver who surrendered only after a 3-mile chase through Fairfax County late Sunday night. The last mile, police said, was afoot and through heavy underbrush.

Sergeant Cecil E. Brown, of Fairfax police, said he signaled Weaver to stop at 10:30 p. m. on Lee blvd. at Kamp Washington. Weaver, he said stepped on the gas and sped toward Washington. Brown said he gave chase and forced Weaver's car off the road and into a bank.

Brown reported that the driver fled into the brush and that he caught up to him after a mile of cross-country pursuit. The Dunn Loring man was charged with drunken driving and resisting arrest.

Bethesda, Md., police early yesterday chased two youths in a stolen car 14 miles, firing eight shots before a bullet punctured a tire and wrecked the car. Its occupants escaped afoot.

Officers L. B. Thompson and John A. Payne said their police cruiser was forced off the road by the youths. The chase reached speeds of 78 miles an hour, they said, ending when the punctured tire threw the racing coupe off the road in the 7200 block of MacArthur blvd. and over a 30-foot embankment. When police reached the scene, the youths had vanished.

Police said the wrecked car was reported stolen on July 16 from its owner, Stewart J. Miller, of 4319 River rd. nw.

Hurt in District traffic accidents yesterday were:

Thomas Papas, 49, of 17 Rhode Island ave. nw., who was admitted to Casualty Hospital with a possible concussion and possible dislocated back. Papas, a passenger in a taxicab, was hurt when the vehicle collided with a Capital Transit Co. bus at 11th and K sts. ne., at 2:30 p. m.

Mrs. Merriam Dies; Daughter Of D. C. Mayor

Mrs. Rose Wallach Merriam, a lifelong Washingtonian and descendant of a family prominent in Washington history, died unexpectedly Sunday evening at Beachhold, her Newport, R. I. summer home. She was 69.

A direct descendant of Col. Charles Sims, one-time mayor of Alexandria and Gen. George Washington's aide for many years, Mrs. Merriam was active during the war in arranging parties and dances for servicemen on leave.

Before the war she was sometimes referred to as "the Elsa Maxwell of Washington" for her activities in preparing social events.

Her father was the late Richard Wallach, a former marshal of the District and from 1861 through 1868 Mayor of Washington. Mr. Wallach was elected acting Mayor by the City Council on August 26, 1861, after the duly elected chief official had refused to take an oath of loyalty to the United States. He was re-elected three times.

Mrs. Merriam was educated here in several private schools. Her marriage to John H. Merriam, a Navy officer, ended in divorce.

She belonged to St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square. She served for many years as secretary of the 1925 F Street Club, of which she was an early member. She had made her home for several years with her sister, Mrs Woodbury Blair at 1607 New Hampshire ave. nw. She had also lived in the old family residence at 1616 19th st. nw.

Besides her former husband, she is survived by her sister, Mrs. Woodbury Blair, presently in Newport, and two sons, John H. Merriam, jr., 4814 Chevy Chase dr., Chevy Chase, and William R Merriam, 1616 19th st. nw. Another sister, Mrs. Mary Wallach Mitchell of Washington, died at Beachholm a year ago.

Damp Babies Make Sour Statesmen

By Genevieve Reynolds

Nine-month-old Judy Griffin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Griffin, of 5122 H st. se., yesterday chuckled and cried her way through her first modeling engagement for cameramen, expectant fathers and newshawks.

Judy smiled through the disrobing process as long as she could sit. But when placed on her back for diapering—all for the benefit of trembling, soon-to-be papas and the press, she let out a few squalls. Photographers clucked, chortled and baby-talked to dry up the young model's tears. Eventually they won and William R. Gause, jr., of Memphis, Tenn., president of the National Institute of Diaper Services, successfully demonstrated the Darrah-fold.

Darrah-Fold for Comfort

The Darrah-fold is the creation of a young Pittsburgh, Pa., nurse, Mrs. Charles Darrah. The process allows for 5 inches of material down the important center of the baby, leaving two thicknesses at the unimportant sides. It is made by taking a regular size diaper and folding each end in about 3 or 4 inches. Then the ends are folded again so they overlap in the center of the diaper.

This method provides maximum absorbency with minimum bulkiness, and keeps babies drier longer, acording to Gause and John K. Jones and Harper Schimpff, operators of the Dy-Dee Wash of Washington.

So gather 'round, all ye jumpy, expectant fathers. Learn the proper diapering methods, for upon the fold may depend world peace, contended smiling, blond Gause, in a press conference preceding the formal opening of a two-day conference of the board of directors of the National Institute of Diaper Services.

Announcing far-reaching plans to establish new classes to teach parents and baby sitters throughout the country the proper method of diapering babies, he told the audience: "Improper diapering of babies can cause emotional disturbances which may affect an individual's life and thus indirectly change the course of civilization."

Diapers and World Peace

Pressed as to just how diapering can affect peace, he countered: "We've opened up diapering services in Australia and England; Paris has asked for one.

"The first year of a baby's life is most important. If he is unhappy because of improper diapering, he may develop a feeling of insecurity which will tag him through life."

"If we want to build a peaceful world," he continued, "let's bring up babies who are normal, well adjusted and healtny. Let's start in the cradle," adding that U. N. delegates and diplomats "can't seem to establish enduring peace through treaties and talks. Perhaps proper diapering will do the trick for future generations."

Other Ways to Do Job

Gause pointed out that the new Darrah method makes five ways a baby may be properly diapered—the three cornered, the rectangular, the square plus the kite fold introduced by NID during the war to conserve cloth.

Generally fathers diaper babies better than mothers. Reason—they are so green that they learn the scientific way, according to Gause. "Returning veterans evidence particular interest in learning to diaper babies," he said.

Asked about the material situation on the diaper front, John Garland, secretary of NID, replied that "comparatively the material situation is good. Wholesale prices are $2.25 per dozen and retail prices about $3.50 per dozen."

Hosts to the visiting groups of diaper service members during their stay in the Capital are Schimpff and Jones, operators of the Dy-Dee Wash at 60 Canal st.

Jones said that he hoped to set up local diapering classes for expectant mothers and fathers. "I want to get the Red Cross to cooperate with us," he explained. "Meantime, if there's any doubt about how to fold and put on baby's diaper, just ask a Dy-Dee Wash driver. He'll oblige."

Attending the two-day conclave, which opened yesterday at the Statler Hotel, are the following members of the board of directors: John V. Alcorn, Lullaby Diaper Service, Atlanta, Ga.; William W. Crow, Infants Diaper Service, Birmingham, Ala., and George F. Howson of Dy-Dee Wash, Cleveland, Ohio. Also here are Mrs. Hope Lewis, Dy-Dee Wash, Inc., Detroit, Mich.; George Garland, secretary of the National Institute of Diaper Services, and Thomas J. Skillman, jr., of Dy-Dee Wash, Philadelphia, Pa.

Young Romance Quickly Leads to Engagement, Soon Broken by Girl, Much to Man's Sorrow; But Still He Courts Her, Hoping to Win Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Eight months ago I met a girl and we started dating. Before long I realized I was much in love with her; she seemed to care a great deal for me, and we became engaged.

By nature I am very kind hearted and really enjoy doing things for people. I would send her candy, flowers, etc.,—and then all of a sudden she announced her desire to break the engagement, saying she wasn't sure she loved me.

This really hurt; but I am willing to do anything I can to change her mind and she readily admits I am the nicest boy she has ever known. Our trouble seems to stem from the fact that I am too serious. I am doing postgraduate work and spend a lot of time on study, I admit.

Worry Interferes With His Studies

MOST of our disagreements are due to the fact that she likes to have fun, go to the movies, dances, etc., and I am not able to go with her as often as I should. Her mother mentions that she looks for lots of attention and affection, and since I can't give her a lot of my personal attention, maybe this is the difficulty.

Does she really mean it when she says she doesn't love me? Could she say that and still care a lot for me? I have a feeling that she does care a lot for me, but doesn't want me to know it. She often says she never wants anyone to be too sure of her. She knows definitely that I am much in love with her.

As things stand now, she has another boy friend but still dates me once a week. My worry over the situation is affecting my studies and I would like your advice on what I should do in the circumstances. If I were convinced she doesn't really love me, I would be through. Knowing myself, there would be no going back once I made a final break.

But is her attitude due to the fact that I spend too much time on study? If I gave more attention to her and less time to study, would we get along better? Your counsel will be greatly appreciated.

P. B.

Man's in Grip Of Compulsion

DEAR P. B.: You're barking up the wrong tree. This girl is not for you. Even if you could win her as wife—and obviously you can't—the result would be a nerve wracking mesalliance from start to finish.

Moreover, you're not in love with her, really. Your attachment to her is unrealistic, of compulsive character, and signifies: 1. Your intense anxious unrecognized hunger to enjoy a normal social life. 2. Your unconscious neurotic expectation that romantic love, or the socially accomplished "ideal" love partner will magically appear to solve this frustration for you.

Jane (let's call her), being a socially outgoing, perhaps even a frivolous, personality, seems to click with your unconscious image of the perfect gal to do this job for you: to brighten your customary introvert solitude with her effervescent company, and open doors to people and "things to do" when you're in a mood to come out of hiding.

Shows Extremes Of Emotionalism

OPPOSITES attract romantically, sometimes; but superficially, and not for long—as married "opposites" will testify. Your courtship started on this note and broke down when the novelty wore off for Jane,—who, although she may be pampered and selfish, at least seems free of neurotic compulsion to take the line of least resistance in coping with experience, which is a major factor contributing to your whole-life difficulty, I think.

For lack of alternative theories on how to ease your neurotic isolation, you cling obsessively to Jane, after she has frankly turned you down. And you're prepared to retire in an implacable huff if finally convinced that she means what she says. These are extremes of unserviceable emotional attitudes.

For advice: Take Jane at her word, break off dating—as an aid to getting her out of mind,—and in pursuit of useful higher learning, look about for a good psychological instructor to help you get started on a better-balanced "design for living." M. H.

Worker Health Act Explained By Dr. Cronin

Passage of the Employe Health Bill—Public Law 658—is a progressive step forward in employe-employer relations, Dr. John W. Cronin, director of Employe Health Division, Bureau of Medical Service, U. S. Public Health Service, told members of the Woman's National Democratic Club.

Guest speaker at one of the summer tea series yesterday, he outlined the provisions of the laws passed by Congress this month, which authorizes heads of Federal departments to establish health programs for their employes with funds appropriated by Congress.

Provisions of the bill as explained by Dr. Cronin are (1) preemployment and periodic examinations; (2) emergency treatment of medical and dental cases when needed; (3) referral of employes to private physicians for protracted treatment; (4) educational and preventive health programs, and assistance in a crisis such as the recent smallpox vaccinations.

Extension Soles Were Popular In 12th Century

Extension leather soles, growing favorite feature of American style-plus-comfort shoes, had a startling forerunner in footwear history: the medieval poulaine.

Nowadays anyone can buy leather soles, but in the Middle Ages only the very rich could afford them. The poor went barefoot or wrapped their feet in rags.

The wealthy in thirteenth-century England competed in a display of their riches. One method was to stress that they could afford plenty of leather to cushion their feet. More and more leather was added to shoes, until extensions of toes became so long that they were stuffed with moss to prevent their doubling under and being stepped on.

CLINTON P. ANDERSON
Secretary of Agriculture Says:

American Women—

Your Used Fats Are Still Needed!

America's homemakers have saved and turned in over 600 million pounds of used cooking fats since 1942. This is an average of nearly 20 pounds for each family in the United States. It is a record of which every woman can be proud.

However, it is still necessary to conserve every pound of fat, since the over-all fat supply situation is little better now than it was last year when we were desperately short, particularly of industrial fats.

Manufacture of many of the things we all use and wear in our daily lives requires industrial fats or the products of industrial fats. Used cooking fats turned in by American women have been and continue to represent an important part of our total industrial fats supply. Every pound of salvaged fat helps meet the need.

Clinton P. Anderson, Secretary of Agriculture

Your Questions On Homemaking

What is the procedure for cleaning silver by boiling in salt and soda water? K. L. M.

Use a large aluminum pan and enough water to cover the silver. Mix one teaspoonful of salt and one of soda with every quart of water. Put pan on range and keep water at boiling point. Tarnish will disappear almost instantly as silver pieces go in. Turn them out, wash and dry.

If a vase or pitcher is too large to be immersed at one time, it must be cleaned in sections; that is, it must be turned until every part has been cleaned.

Caution: Do not use this method for silver with an oxidized or French gray finish, or for candlesticks or other items that might be damaged by being immersed in water.

I have a new white rayon blouse that absorbed brown tint from hose I carelessly got into my wash. I tried using a chlorine bleach to remove the stain, but the blouse fared even worse and turned yellow in large areas. can I salvage this blouse? E. E. S.

Chlorine solutions, unless they are very mild, are injurious to rayons. Unfortunately, once the fabric is damaged, little can be done to restore it to its original condition. However, before abandoning the blouse, you might try bleaching with sodium perborate and hydrogen peroxide. Mix one level teaspoon sodium perborate with one pint hydrogen peroxide. Sponge the spots liberally with this solution. Then rinse in clear water and repeat if necessary. One of the commercial dye-stripping agents recommended for use on rayon might also be effective. These can be bought in drug stores.

Is it possible to resilver mirrors at home? M. J. C.

Resilvering mirrors is a job that should be done professionally by an expert. It's a complicated procedure that involves mixing and filtering chemical solutions and applying them skillfully to the glass.

A drop of chlorox was spilled on a new blue sports shirt. Is there any way to restore the original color (or similar coloring) to the spot? P. L.

If the shirt is washable, why not tint or dye the whole thing with blue dye? It would make it a bit darker in color, but the spot would be less conspicuous. It might be possible to dilute blue ink and apply it carefully to the spot with a bit of cotton wrapped around an orange stick. However, if it didn't match and ran into the surrounding area, the results might be worse than the white spot.

How can imitation leather upholstery be best preserved? V. G. M.

Dust the upholstery daily with a clean soft untreated cloth to prevent excessive soiling. Wash occasionally with a cloth or sponge wrung out in mild lukewarm soapsuds. Rinse with a clean cloth or sponge wrung out in clear lukewarm water. Dry thoroughly with a soft cloth.

How should a cast-iron frying pan be seasoned before using it for the first time? E. B. B.

Wash the pan and scour it with mild scouring powder until the lacquer coating is entirely removed. Wash and dry thoroughly. Apply a liberal coat of salad oil or unsalted fat to the inside of the utensil every 15 to 20 minutes. Wipe grease out. Wash in hot soapsuds. Rinse and dry thoroughly. For several weeks, rub unsalted fat on the interior each time the utensil is used. Seasoning is a cumulative process and takes time to develop.

Will you tell me how a strapless brassiere (with wire that is not removable) should be laundered? P. L.

Dip the garment up and down in warm soapsuds. If necessary, scrub with a small brush. Rinse and dry rapidly in the sunshine or any warm, airy place so that the wire will not rust on the brassiere.

How can I remove a bright yellow stain made by tincture of iron on a white linen dresser scarf? L. B.

Methods used in removing iron rust should be employed in taking out this stain. Sprinkle the spot with salt, squeeze lemon juice on it, and spread in the sun to dry. Add more lemon juice if the stain still shows. Rinse well following the treatment.

This stain can also be taken out with iron rust soap. The latter comes in tubes and is sold in the new 14th st. store of a large drug chain.

Pepped Up Biarritz

Even Lady Iris' Husband Was a Bouncing Boy

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THE UNITED STATES immigration authorities are chasing Lady Iris Mountbatten back to England. By September 1 this overly energetic young woman, who scattered a few bad checks, must be on her way home.

Lady Iris is too often identified as a daughter of Lord Louis Mountbatten, British Viceroy of India. Lord Louis has two delightful daughters who spent several wartime years in New York with Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt. Lady Iris is a daughter of the Marquess of Carisbrooke, a son of Victoria's daughter, Princess Beatrice, and Prince Henry of Battenberg, who anglicized his name to Mountbatten. So she's really, truly a great-granddaughter of Queen Victoria, a cousin of both Lord Louis and King George VI.

Several years ago Lady Iris married Hamilton O'Malley-Keyes, but resumed her maiden name after shedding her blond, 6-foot-4 husband. Hamilton concentrated on tap dancing and once toyed with the idea of opening a dance studio in Washington. He's eldest of the five outsize O'Malley-Keyes "kids" who injected a furious jazz-age note into prewar Biarritz.

His mother, red-headed Jane, was the daughter of a New Haven department store owner named Malley. Marrying an Irish officer named Keyes, she persuaded him to assume the fashionably hyphenated cognomen of O'Malley-Keyes. After his death Jane continued to entertain Biarritz notables. Since the war, pace unabated, she's been partying in Bermuda, Palm Beach and, for all we know, Hollywood and Timbuctoo.

Eclipse in Arlington

WHAT HAPPENS to European statesmen who, put on the spot by Communists, make world headlines for a week, then are whipped to safety across the Atlantic. Once in Washington they're news for a few days more, then drop completely out of sight.

Only a month ago Hungary's Premier, Ferenc Nagy, was forced to resign by Communist members of his government. He was vacationing in Switzerland, and his younger son was held hostage in Hungary until the resignation was effected.

Met in Washington by an elder son who had worked in the Hungarian Legation, the Nagys were interviewed thoroughly, then disappeared. Now they're comfortably installed in a small South Arlington house. The former premier is meeting his first month's bills in style by writing an article for the Saturday Evening Post. His son acts as translator, as Hungarian is his father's only language.

The former premier is small, neat and extremely well dressed. He was born a peasant, cultivated his own land and became moderately well-to-do solely by his efforts. In spite of his earthy origin he is up to date in world affairs. Though he can scarcely escape politics for some time to come, Nagy's ambition is to own a small farm nearby—and work it himself.

PROSPERITY NOTE. Word trickles in from New York that Vincent Astor has bought a Grumman-Mallard plane costing $125,000. A pilot and copilot, on full-time service, operate the machine.

No one's surprised at Vincent Astor picking up a Grumman-Mallard, but what is surprising is that 40 similar planes have been sold this summer. There's a Texan, rumored to net a two-million-dollar monthly income, who ordered three! The salesman who was smart enough to roll up this score is Payne Bingham, son of Harry Payne Bingham and nephew of Congresswoman Frances Bolton.

Mrs. Archbold's Vacation

Mrs. Ann Archbold has journeyed out to Minneapolis for the christening of her first grandson, born a few weeks ago to Armar Archbold and his Minnesota wife.

Mrs. Archbold is Washington's most anachronistic resident; she winters in Nassau and deliberately summers in the Capital. Her summers are a bit pleasanter than yours or mine, for her 50 acres off Reservoir Road include a man-size forest, a swimming pool and other such delightful adjuncts of wealth. Her house shelters a wonderful collection of giraffe heads, elephant tusks and hooves—all from animals shot by herself.

Before the war she used to laze around the Pacific in a junk built to her specifications. The junk, left in Hawaii, survived Pearl Harbor and later was used as an officers' club. During the war Mrs. Archbold filled her pool with Waves—and Wacs—and housed a group of soldier musicians who practiced on her magnificent pipe organ and her brace of grand pianos.

Today, everyone musical, artistic, literary turns up at chez Ann Archbold's, and it's all done simply, without butlers or secretaries, so necessary to the usual overworked hostess.

Tepid Shower, Cool Beverage Best Prescription for Heat

By Ida Jean Kain

I'LL not get into any heated argument about whether it makes you hotter to talk about it. Probably it does . . . still, it's a relief to know that others feel the heat too. But don't let it make you hot under the collar if someone voices that irritating summer sizzler . . . is it hot enough for you! Give them the cold shoulder.

Since it's getting rid of heat that is cooling, what about cold showers? They feel wonderfully cooling at the moment, but under the stimulus of the cold water, the body has to generate more heat, and the blood is brought to the surface. So a cool shower is more cooling and refreshing than an icy cold one.

Easy on the Steam

IN taking a tub bath, don't get up steam either. The scientific way to draw a tub in summer is to let the water run cold until almost the level desired, then turn on the hot water, letting it run until the water is tepid. That way the room does not become filled with steam and you do not get overheated.

There's a theory that hot tea, or hot soup helps a person to cool off on a hot day. On a hot, dry day this works fine and aids nature's cooling system. But when the humidity is high, the perspiration induced by the hot liquid is not quickly evaporated and only adds to the general discomfort. Cold beverages require body heat to warm them in the stomach, and therefore, help to carry off body heat when the water is eliminated. In hot weather, cool beverages are a great help if not taken too cold or too rapidly.

Don't Gulp Drinks

GULPING down a cold drink is too great a shock to the nerves of the stomach. And that doesn't apply just to sissies by any means! In warm weather, a muscular relaxation sets in and this reacts on the digestive tract. Don't tax it. Summer meals should be lighter. Heavy, rich foods are not needed, but it isn't a good plan to switch suddenly to only cold foods. Have one hot food at each meal. Of course if you're accustomed to eating a cold lunch, that's a different thing. But have something hot at the other meals.

And what about spirited beverages in frosted glasses? Many inquire if gin and rum are less "heating" than whiskies? They all have about the same calorie potency. Alcohol is concentrated fuel, regardles of the ice, or how cooling it seems. Of course the tinkle of ice does seem cooling on a hot night, and mint is refreshing . . . so while you're up . . .

Begin Slowly Introducing Solid Foods

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

When baby is about 3 months old his pediatrician is apt to say, "Well, it's time now to begin giving him some solid foods," or his mother may say, "Don't you think I could feed him something, now? He doesn't seem satisfied with just his milk."

Whatever the initial motivation; it remains for the mother to offer that food in a way to promote the baby's interest in eating, quite as much as to increase his nourishment.

Start With Cereal

The first food, because of its bland flavor, probably will be cereal. It was once the custom to choose a fine, wheat cereal and cook it for hours in the double boiler. That can still be done, but it's simpler to use one of the precooked baby cereals which can be mixed at feeding time with some of the baby's warmed formula. If the baby is nursing, then use a mixture of half canned milk and half boiled water and pour a tablespoon or more of that over the teaspoon of cereal.

Mix it smooth. Have it runny, so the baby will find it easy to swallow, and then offer a portion of this on the end of a small spoon. It's amusing to see the baby's antics when he gets this new food in his mouth. He may frown and make a wry face. He will work on it with his tongue, in the way in which he has been used to attack the bottle nipple, and his efforts may send it right out of his mouth and dribbling down his chin.

Be Patient

Don't be upset. He doesn't hate it, he doesn't know how to manage mouthfuls of a solid food as he does the drops of liquid food.

Scrape it back into his mouth, or try another small portion. He'll get the idea and once it goes down he'll feel quite proud of himself. This is an accomplishment.

When he's had two or three tries at getting this one spoonful into him, call it a day. Try again next day at the same time with exactly the same amount. Do this for several more days until baby knows what to expect and how to swallow his portions of cereal.

Then begin to increase it by one teaspoonful at a time. It may take several weeks before he has worked up to two or three tablespoons.

What is important is not so much the nourishment from that teaspoonful of cereal, but the introduction to a new utensil for eating, the acceptance of a food with a strange taste and texture, all accomplished without arousing the baby's resentment against them. That is the mother's achievement.

Furniture Twosomes

Now "twosomes" are the style, but not simply in golf. Paired house furnishings they are, identical little tables, two chairs that are alike. They give balance, interest and new attractiveness to a room. Slip-covering chairs that are almost alike in shape does the trick for the frugal-minded. Picking fabrics that are easily cleansed in the household washer is another money-saving move.

How to Have Vitamin C And Cook It

The method of cooking vegetables may not be as important as has been believed in the retention of nutrients other than vitamin C, according to recent tests at Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station in Blacksburg.

Mrs. Mary S. Eheart, associate biochemist, reported experiments on green beans and cabbage which seemed to indicate that factors other than the cooking method had as much, and in some cases more, effect on nutrient retention.

These factors included daily market variations, variety, weather, soil and maturity of the vegetable.

Losses Accur

Data based on the nutritive values found in cooked vegetables showed, Mrs. Eheart said, that large vitamin C losses occurred in any method of cooking. She recommended, therefore, at least one daily serving of one of the foods which is abundant in this vitamin and which can be served raw—cabbage, tomatoes, citrus fruits, strawberries or cantaloupe.

The best method found for reducing vitamin C losses in cooked cabbage was cutting the head in radial sections with the core included rather than shredding and then cooking the cabbage in about twice its weight of water. Mrs. Eheart said this method retained about two thirds of the original vitamin C content.

Way to Do It

Vitamin C survived better in green beans when they were cooked until just tender in a minimum of water in a tightly covered pan. Snapped beans were found to hold the vitamin better than frenched beans (cut the long way).

Black-eyed peas cooked fresh, Mrs. Eheart reported, were found to be an excellent source of vitamins C and B1. Cooked dried, they were found to have lost much of their C content, she said.

100 Wild Dogs Roam County, Attack Stock

Hagerstown, Md., July 21 (AP).—More than 100 half-wild dogs are terrorizing Washington County, Sheriff Joseph D. Baker estimated today, advising farmers to shoot them on sight.

"Shoot them whether they are tagged or not," Baker said. He added that any dog can be legally killed when found on one's property without being on a leash.

Ranging county farmlands in wolf packs, stray dogs have attacked livestock in at least two places, he said. One farmer reported his sheep had been killed by a pack of half-wild dogs, Baker said. The number of sheep involved was not given. Another county farmer said he had found a pack of dogs attempting to kill a calf.

There have been no reports of the dog packs attacking human beings, Sheriff Baker said. But the number of complaints about raids on livestock have reached the point, he said, "where I don't know what to do about the dog problem."

He said the stack of complaints received by his office indicate that the number of half-wild dogs in the county is over 100.

It's been four months since the arrival of Lawrence, left, and Richard, right, enabled Mrs. Charles Warren, 913 South Washington Street, Alexandria, to collect her twin insurance. For the time being the Warrens were able to squeeze both babies into a single crib, but the crib was one that couldn't be duplicated. So they bought a pair of twin cribs and listed the original for sale in The Post.

"People began calling first thing in the morning," reports Mrs. Warren. "The third caller bought the crib over the telephone, sight unseen, sent me a money order for it, and came all the way from Silver Spring to pick it up! At least 15 other people called during the day."

Those other people who called too late may still be searching for a crib. If you have one to dispose of, reach those and other potential buyers like Mrs. Warren did—through an ad in The Post. Cost is low, effectiveness is high. Do it now.

Doctors Praise Gen. Bradley For Lack of Red Tape in VA

Baltimore, July 21 (AP).—Top-drawer Maryland medical men today cited the Veterans Administration policies of Gen. Omar N. Bradley as "free of red tape and politics."

In a report on the care of veterans at the VA's Fort Howard and Perry Point hospitals, the Dean's committee of Baltimore said the group:

"Heartily indorses and supports the efforts of General Bradley and his staff for providing adequate medical care and treatment of veterans."

Dr. Wylie Is Chairman

The committee was established in March, 1946, to organize the professional staffs at the two Maryland hospitals.

Chairman is Dr. H. Boyd Wylie, acting dean of the University of Maryland Medical School.

Other members are Dr. Alan M. Chesney, dean of Johns Hopkins Medical School; Dr. Lewis P. Gundry and Dr. Harry C. Hull of Maryland University, and Dr. Alan C. Woods and Dr. Perrin H. Long of Hopkins.

"Few of the members of the staffs of the University of Maryland or Johns Hopkins hospitals would be participating in the program were it not for the policies established by General Bradley," the report said.

Like Present Plan

Listing staff members who have enlisted for VA service, the report said, "These doctors are interested in working under the present plan because:

"It permits them to maintain a high type of medical care and treatment for veterans;

"It is relatively free from the stifling effects of 'red tape' and of bureaucracy;

"It permits the doctors to practice under conditions comparable to those existing in the best civilian hospitals in Baltimore;

"It is free (or has been so far) from so-called 'politics.'"

Baltimore Seeks Special Session

Baltimore, July 21 (AP).—A committee headed by Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro will call on Governor Lane early next week, preparatory to asking a special session of the State Legislature to grant Baltimore renewal of its special taxing powers.

The committee was named today at a conference of the City Board of Estimates and the mayor's Budget Advisory Committee.

It followed a report by Budget Director Herbert Fallin to the effect the city must raise between $8,000,000 and $9,000,000 in special taxes in order to keep the 1948 tax rate down to the present figure of $2.96.

The program would call for legislation to keep in effect special taxes on tobacco products, liquor, utility bills of industrial and commercial concerns, and pinball machines. These taxes otherwise will expire at the end of this year.

PUC Reviews WRECO Plan Of Dissolution

The District Public Utilities Commission, after a public hearing yesterday, was considering the plan for dissolving the Washington Railway and Electric Company.

The railway company, parent firm of PEPCO, would be abolished under a recapitalization plan which would allow PEPCO to increase its authorized capital stock from $30,000,000 to $75,000,000.

The refinancing plan, according to V. A. McElfresh, executive accountant and auditor of the PUC, would not "adversely affect the consumers of electricity in the District of Columbia."

The plan already has been approved by the Securities and Exchange Commission and by the District Court.

As proposed by PEPCO, 140,000 shares of new preferred stock would be issued to redeem 700,000 outstanding shares of 5½ and 6 per cent preferred stock. In addition, a $24,862,500 stock dividend would be declared and this amount reclassified in holdings of outstanding common stock into 85,000 shares of new preferred and 2,961,250 shares of new common stock.

PEPCO 5½ and 6 per cent preferred stocks were quoted yesterday at 107¼ bid.

Underwriters will be asked to submit bids on the new PEPCO stock to be issued.

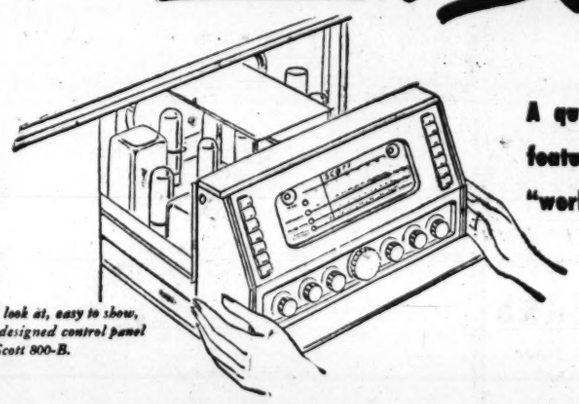
What makes a Scott —a Scott?



A quick scanning of the salient features that make the Scott the "world's finest radio-phonograph."

Beautiful to look at, easy to show, the Teague-designed control panel of the new Scott 800-B.

Radio engineering—without a lot of price taboos—that keeps a technical eye to building just as fine an instrument as we know how.

Tubes aplenty—but, more important still, it's the way they're used that helps make a Scott . . . a Scott!

Fidelity range—virtually equal to the hearing range of the human ear (20 to 15,000 cycles). This is very unusual and can be tested in the following way: Play one of your own favorite records on an ordinary phonograph. Then play it on a Scott!

Power output—the ability to "handle" all the tone the Scott is built to reproduce. This allows the loud passages to swell naturally to full, gorgeous volume, without "boom."

Sensitivity—the built-in reach that puts the whole world of radio at the Scott owner's dialing finger tips!

Selectivity—the ability to separate adjacent programs, to bring into sharp focus the particular program you want. The greater the sensitivity of a receiver, the more it receives, and the more vital sharp selectivity becomes. This is a penalty of "greatness," you see. So no radio needs selectivity more than the Scott. None gives more.

Precisely engineered record changer—fast but with "kid glove" handling of your records. Also, it may be set for a 2½-minute pause between selections. Specially designed pickup matches the full fidelity range of the Scott.

Great reproducer—a 15-inch speaker that is really two great speakers in one, one for the treble, another for the bass—big in capacity to handle all the tone the Scott is engineered to reproduce.

FM reception that is "out of this world," as the experts tell us.

Elegance—exposed metal parts of tuning chassis and power unit—exciting to look at, a pleasure to show by means of the easy sliding mechanism that allows the whole chassis and panel to slide forward at a finger touch.

Design—control panel design in clean modern, by Walter Dorwin Teague. Cabinet designs in traditional and modern executed in beautiful veneers by master craftsmen.

Now a new Scott "plus"—a special, exclusive adaptation of a new Dynamic Noise and Scratch Suppressor*—a radically different electronic device that screens out needle scratch but lets the music through. It makes old records sound new, new records sound superb. It will be available soon for use with the present Scott radio-phonographs. You can hear its magic emancipation

Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder left for Brazil yesterday aboard President Truman's new four-engine plane, the Independence.

Snyder will be guest of the Brazilian government for 10 days. He described his trip as a "social visit," but said he would look into industrial developments that might help the United States in the future.

Mediators in Last Try to Avert Rail Strike

San Francisco, July 21 (AP).—Southern Pacific and Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineer officials were called into a special mediation meeting today and a brotherhood officer remarked "there's a possibility" the rail strike, set for 6 p. m. (PST) tonight, could be averted.

Federal Mediator Thomas E. Bickers brought both sides together in a "last ditch effort" to prevent tieup of the carrier's 8000 miles of lines with consequent huge losses in perishable freight.

Harrison Hobart, assistant grand chief of the brotherhood, after accepting Bickers' invitation, said "I'm an optimist" regarding chances for preventing the strike.

Company Points to Offer

"It will depend on the company's willingness to give us some definite assurance that our demands will be met," Hobart added.

The railroad made public a letter it sent to Bickers last Wednesday in which, railroad officials said, the company "proposed going even beyond recommendations of the emergency board" named in 1945 by the late President Roosevelt to adjudicate the engineers' dispute.

In Washington Representative Elliott (D., Calif.) told the House that "millions of tons of food will rot" if engineers strike. The strike threat is "heart-breaking to farmers and businessmen of California," Elliott added:

In Washington also, President Truman announced the names of three labor relations experts to deal with the dispute and a White House statement expressed confidence both parties would "utilize this machinery to the fullest extent."

Grady Lewis Heads Board

It was pointed out in Washington that the Railroad Labor Law requires that strike action be withheld while such a board investigates. Union officials, however, have said previously that the law was complied with when a previous board, appointed by President Roosevelt, reviewed the same case and that the strike would go on even if Truman named a new board.

The President appointed Col. Grady Lewis, Washington lawyer, chairman; Leverett Edwards, Oklahoma City attorney, and Dr. Paul A. Dodd to intervene in the case.

The White House announced that the President's board will begin hearings at 10 a.m. (PST) Wednesday at the Palace Hotel in San Francisco.

The dispute involves a large number of "grievances" rather than wages, hours and working conditions. It affects 20,000 employes directly and 60,000 indirectly.

Slavs Support Guerilla Raids, Greeks Say

Athens, Greece, July 21 (U.P.).—The government reported today that guerillas, equipped with heavy arms and supported by the machine guns of Yugoslav border guards, have raided two villages near the Yugoslav frontier. Unconfirmed press dispatches also reported a third attack.

Gen. Napoleon Zervas, minister of public order, said advices from Florina reported that 300 guerillas swept down from Yugoslavia and assaulted the station of Mesohorion and the town of Mesokabos, 1 mile from the Yugloslav border, with heavy mortar and antitank shells.

These reports said the guerillas were reinforced by machine gun fire from the Fifty-eighth Yugoslav border guards. The ministry estimated 30 mortar shells were fired into Mesohorion, completely destroying nine homes.

Savage Fighting Reported

Afternoon newspapers asserted that a seperate band of 400 guerillas, coming out of Yugoslavia, launched a strong assault on Mouries at dawn Sunday, but were driven back, leaving behind 10 dead. Two Greek soldiers were said to have been killed and two wounded.

The Athens press reported savage fighting in the Zagori mountain range between Kalpaki and the Corfu Channel.

The press also reported that the war ministry is considering ousting Brig. Stylianos Manidakes, chief of the operations branch of the general staff, and replacing him with Major General Pentzopoulos, commander of the Eighth Division, under rules which provide a higher rank for the post.

Manidakes' version of last week's fighting was conservative and conflicted with accounts of other officials, notably Zervas. Manidakes said there was no evidence an international brigade had invaded Greece, claimed the guerillas never threatened Ioannina, capital of Epirus, and criticized details and descriptions disseminated by "irresponsible people."

American Officials Arrive

Meanwhile, the Greek Defense Council met with Maj. Gen. William G. Livesay, chief of the American Military Mission, and Rear Admiral John A. Snackenberg to discuss size of the Greek army.

Four American mission officials arrived by air from Washington: Alvin Roseman, acting chief of finance; John Howard, legal chief; Dr. Oswald Hedly, public health, and Elmer Holmgreen, agriculture.

They were accompanied by Judge Earl Meyer, legal assistant; Hugh Gallagher, agricultural assistant, and Ross Hazeltine, assistant press officer.

Dwight Griswold, head of the American Aid Mission, scheduled a series of meetings with commission heads and military personnel to discuss the Greek budget.

Death of Md. Child Being Investigated

Cumberland, Md., July 21 (AP).—State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris said today his office was investigating the death of 18-month-old Junior Clinton Wills.

Officials at Allegany Hospital said the child died shortly after being brought there by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mervin C. Jones, suffering from a fractured collarbone and numerous contusions and abrasions about the body.

Dr. H. V. Deming, deputy medical examiner, said Jones and his wife told authorities the injuries had been caused by several falls.

Deming withheld a verdict on the death pending the outcome of an autopsy.

Group Will Urge Poultry Buying For Foreign Aid

Richmond, Va., July 21 (AP).—A delegation of leaders in the Virginia poultry industry, augmented by representatives of at least eight national poultry organizations, will travel to Washington tomorrow to present to the House Agriculture Committee a proposal that chicken and turkey be purchased by the Government to feed people of liberated countries.

Howard S. Zigler, of Broadway, president of the Virginia State Poultry Federation, will head the delegation.

Zigler said today that the Virginia delegation would contend before the House committee that present Government purchasing policies, which practically exclude poultry, bring about "an artificially unbalanced economic situation" for the poultry producer.

Government purchases of grain, Zigler said, have pushed up the price of poultry feed in recent months, while prices received for chickens and turkeys have remained at about the same level.

Big 4 Rubber Workers Seek Pay Increase

Cleveland, July 21 (AP).—The CIO-United Rubber Workers International Policy Committee has decided to ask the rubber industry's "big four"—Goodyear, Goodrich, United States Rubber and Firestone—for another 1947 pay raise.

The committee blamed rising living costs for its decision yesterday to seek more money from "big four," signers of the first wage contract this year among the Nation's major producers.

In making its decision, the committee took advantage of a reopening clause in their contract, signed March 22, stipulating that wages could be renegotiated within four months. The action came only two days short of that period.

The rubber workers, said URW President L. S. Buckmaster, want boosts that will (a) meet the rise in living costs between January, 1947 and the time a new agreement is reached, added to (b) "whatever is necessary to equal other wage patterns."

He gave no specific estimate of the amount, but last March URW members got 11½ cents hourly raise, bringing them to a union-estimated basic wage rate of about $1.50 an hour.

The March agreement, signed less than 24 hours before a strike deadline, was considered a forerunner of industrial peace this year. Subsequent contracts in other industries provided slightly higher wage increase than those secured by the rubber workers.

Ostepath Describes Cross-Eye Technique

Chicago, July 21 (INS).—D. E. B. Decker of Daytona Beach, Fla., today described a new surgical technique for correcting cross eyes or "squint" which requires no bandaging or extensive hospitalization.

Dr. Decker told the fifty-first annual convention of the American Osteopathic Association that "cross eyes can be straightened by releasing the connective tissue surrounding the muscles that pull the eyes out of line."

Dr. Decker said he has been performing the operation for four years. Ordinary procedure involves cutting the eye muscles and suturing the tissues. Only a few hours of hospitalization are required even with general anasthesia, he said.

Survivor of Collision In Fair Condition

Warrenton, Va., July 21 (Spl).—Thirteen-year-old Marjorie Ann Whiting of Ferndale, Mich., who was critically injured in a head-on auto-oil truck collision Friday, was listed as in "fair" condition at Physicians' Hospital here today.

Hospitals officials said the girl has had lapses of consciousness since the accident in which her mother, sister and brother were killed.

New Arrests By Burmese Are Reported

Rangoon, India, July 21 (AP).—Burmese newspapers reported today that Bandoola U Sein, propaganda minister in Burma's Japanese-puppet government during the war, had been arrested in a roundup following Saturday's massacre of seven council ministers.

The government refused to reveal any information.

Former Premier U Saw and 19 of his Myochit Party lieutenants were taken into custody Saturday night, following a police raid in which three other Myochit members were killed. Local newspapers said yesterday 50 persons had been arrested in all.

An authoritative source said a lynch-bent mob of 5000 persons gathered at Rangoon's central jail last night, and demanded that U Saw be turned over to them.

The crowd dispersed when prison officials said U Saw was not there.

Independence Still Planned

London, July 21 (AP).—Prime Minister Attlee told the Commons today that planning for early independence for Burma would continue despite the mass assassination of more than half the Burmese cabinet. He said the cause of the bloody outbreak was "not yet clear."

Tom Driberg, Laborite, was rebuked for his charge that "conservative gentlemen" in Britain "incited" U Saw, "to treachery and sabotage."

Attlee said "every step has been taken" to provide reinforcements of British troops.

[The United Press said Attlee announced that Indian troops had been alerted and would be rushed into Burma if the need arises.]

Steel Concerns Risking Slump, Reuther Says

By The Associated Press

Walter P. Reuther, president of the CIO United Auto Workers, told Congress yesterday that steel corporations were resisting expansion and risking "a major depression within a very few years."

Arguing that the Government should "move in" on the industry if it fails to enlarge, Reuther testified that the country needs the capacity to make 100 million tons of steel annually to insure full employment in 1950. Yearly economical steel capacity now is about 80 million tons.

His testimony, to the House Small Business Subcommittee investigating the steel industry, was described by Senator Cain (R., Wash.), presiding, as a "splendid contribution."

But the Senator told Reuther that strikes of coal, steel and electrical workers, as well as shortages of steel, had hurt production.

"If men lay themselves off, there can't be any automobiles," he observed.

Reuther challenged the estimate of an earlier witness, President Wilfred Sykes of the Inland Steel Corp. of Chicago that the probable average demand by 1950 would be 56 million tons of unfinished steel—far below present production.

"That would mean 35 or 40 millions unemployed," Reuther said, "and it would be the shortest way to commit national suicide since the atomic bomb was devised."

Reuther declared the steel companies were embarking on a course of "planned scarcity, calculated to enhance profits and to fortify their monopoly hold over this basic industry."

Reuther pointed to a one-week shutdown of General Motors, starting yesterday, as one of a long series of shortage stoppages. These, he said, have cost 360,000 automobiles this year.

Lutheran Convention Is Opened

Chicago, July 20 (AP).—With a rededication to the work of "Building the Kingdom of God," delegates of the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Missouri, Ohio and other States tonight opened their centennial convention.

The nine-day convention, which will reach a climax next Sunday with an afternoon celebration program in Soldier Field, began with a solemn liturgical and musical service in Orchestra Hall.

In his introductory sermon, Dr. Arthur Brunn of Brooklyn, N. Y., second vice president of the synod, told the assembly:

"If we would not fail God, we must remember that God has made us debtors to the whole world. We must feel that the burden of the world's misery is our burden. We must understand that everybody in the world is our brother and that we are our brother's keeper."

The 950 voting delegates, representing over 5000 congregations and preaching stations throughout the United States, and in Central and South America and in Europe, will begin their deliberations tomorrow, with many issues to be presented to the convention.

Chief projects to be considered, said the Rev. J. W. Behnken of Chicago, president of the synod, include requests for appropriations of nearly five million dollars for expansion of educational and missionary work.

Also to be considered is changing of the synod's name to one more representative of its extensive influence, and revision of by-laws and regulations.

Lake Michigan Raft Crossing Proves Rough

Ludington, Mich., July 20 (U.P.) Forty-eight haggard, shivering men completed the first mass raft crossing of Lake Michigan today and reported that their mission—testing Army rescue equipment—was "pretty rough but a complete success."

Al Redlein, Milwaukee, one of the leaders of the flotilla of 11 motor-driven rubber life rafts which started out from Sheboygan, Wis., at 9 a. m. (CST) yesterday, said he had wanted a rough crossing so "we would have a good test."

"And," he said through chattering teeth, "that's what we certainly got."

Nine of the 11 rafts, one type of which is no larger than an overstuffed davenport, arrived here early today. The first, the "Flying Disc," arrived at 1:45 a. m. (CST), completing the 65-mile trip in 16 hours and 45 minutes.

Four of the rafts came in unassisted. Five were towed the last few miles because the lake was so rough. All were ashore in 18½ hours. Two of the 11 rafts were forced to turn back yesterday shortly after clearing Sheboygan, one because of a leaky valve, the other because a teen-age passenger became seasick.

The experimental run across the wind-whipped lake was made to test the performance and fuel consumption of outboard motors propelling the rafts; sunburn lotion; a new "E" ration which the Army describes as better than the wartime "K" ration; special type sails for the rafts; radio sets and other survival equipment designed for transoceanic planes.

The first to arrive here carried Donald Nielson, 38, Burlington, Wis.; Al Robinson, 45, Burlington; Otto Kohler, 36, Milwaukee, and A. H. Penrod, Cleveland.

Sod Is Turned For St. John's New Building

The need of Christian foundations for peace was stressed yesterday by the Rev. William F. Creighton, as ground was broken for the $190,000 edifice of St. John's Episcopal Church, Bethesda.

Preaching at the worship service preceding the ground-breaking ceremony at Wisconsin ave. and Bradley ln., the Rev. Creighton said:

"Beginning the church foundation is symbolic of our Christian conviction that Christ Himself is the one foundation men can lay for permanent stability, peace and satisfaction in today's troubled world."

The second and third spades full of earth were turned by 9-year-old Helen Dawson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dawson of 6309 Beechwood dr., Chevy Chase, and 7-year-old Logan Wilton, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Logan Wilton of 5413 Glenwood rd., Bethesda. They respectively represented St. John's Sunday School and Junior Choir.

Architects for the new church are Faulkner, Kingsbury and Stenhouse.

Healthy-Looking Stalin Watches Athletes Perform

Moscow, July 20 (AP). — Prime Minister Stalin appeared in public for the first time this summer at a massive sports exhibition today and received a tremendous ovation from the audience of approximately 70,000 in Moscow's Dynamo Stadium.

The sports display lasted for five hours and 30,000 Soviet athletes participated. Although many younger men ducked for cover during an untimely shower, Stalin, who will be 68 years old next December, remained in his seat with other Soviet leaders until the program was finished.

Stalin appeared to be in good health and high spirits when he entered the special box reserved for him with Marshal Klementy Voroshilov and Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov.

Cab Riders Discover Mobile Dramatic Critic

Mrs. Joseph Miller, of 4862 MacArthur blvd., reports that a friend of hers wants to thank a cab driver for refusing to follow instructions.

Friend Pete engaged a cab to take Date Ethel to the movies. They asked to be taken to the Capitol, but the hacker objected.

"Oh, is that so?" replied the surprised Pete. "And just where do you think we ought to go instead?"

"It is, eh? All right, you take us to 'Odd Man Out.' But you'd better know what you're talking about."

So Pete and Ethel saw "Odd Man Out" and enjoyed it very much. That's the reason for the public "thank you" for a cab driver who refused to follow instructions.

However, I also saw "Odd Man Out" and didn't care for it. So, out of sheer cussedness, I think I'll go to the Capitol this afternoon.

"'In the pink' means a worker who isn't loyal."

WISE JUDGE

One of the best conversationalists in town is Leo Deming, the man behind the camera at the John Henderson Studios.

Leo's theory is that if you get the subject involved in an interesting discussion, he'll forget that he's posing, and give you a good relaxed expression.

So Leo specializes in leading questions like, "Mrs. Glmph, have you ever told your husband that you've given him the best years of your life?"

Regardless of the answer, this usually gives Leo a chance to tell the story about the Texas judge who was hearing a divorce complaint. The wife told a long and bitter tale of "having given him the best years of my life," and the judge listened impassively. When the lady was finished, hizzoner threw the case out of court.

Deming

"Madam," he ruled, "since you and your husband are approximately the same age, he must have given you the best years of his life, too. Case dismissed."

"You're filibustering against the wrong bill, Senator—the resolution before the Senate is for adjournment!"

Merry-Go-Round

Lobbyist Tag Is Attached To Bricker

By Drew Pearson

ONE of the most unusual statements made on the Senate floor in several weeks came from Ohio's statuesque Senator Bricker after President Truman denounced the real estate lobby. Waving his arms, he told Senate colleagues that Truman had indulged in the cheapest kind of demagoguery.

Bricker

In contrast, Bricker's colleague from Ohio, Bob Taft, who knows what the real-estate lobby did to the Taft-Ellender Housing Act, remarked that he wouldn't mind investigating the lobby himself. Furthermore, everyone who knows his way around any part of Washington realizes that the real-estate lobby is one of the most powerful operating in the Capital's cocktail lounges. But what a great many people do not realize is that Senator Bricker is hand-in-glove with the lobby—in fact, a part of it.

Bricker is a director of the Buckeye State Building and Loan Association of Columbus, affiliated with the powerful United States Savings and Loan League, which employs Morton Bodfish to carry on one of the most effective and astute real-estate and housing lobbies in Washington. It is estimated that this outfit spends around half a million dollars a year lobbying.

Furthermore, one of the recent confidential bulletins issued by the Morton Bodfish lobby gleefully boasted that Senator Bricker was one of their members and pointed to the fact that Bricker had obligingly introduced four bills to help out. This confidential bulletin, of course, was not supposed to fall into the hands of the press. But it makes highly interesting reading.

Equally interesting is another fact. Bricker was not elected a director of the Buckeye State Building and Loan Association until about the time he was elected a Senator. Furthermore, he was made a director through the instrumentality of his old friend and political angel, John Galbreath, who is also a director of Buckeye State Building and Loan.

John Galbreath is a familiar figure in Ohio's real estate financing business. In fact, he is a power. And he is also a power behind the political destinies of John Bricker. Not only has Galbreath backed Bricker every time he ran, but it is sometimes said in Ohio political circles that Bricker does not even shave in the morning without consulting John Galbreath.

All of which makes Bricker's speech denouncing Truman for criticizing the real estate lobby doubly interesting.

Townsendite Converts

BELIEVE it or not, but the austere and conservative Senate Finance Committee heard quite a lecture on the Townsend old-age pension plan at a closed-door meeting the other day.

Senator George of Georgia accidentally started the discussion when he opposed a bill to give a $20-a-month pension to Spanish War veterans over 65.

"If we keep this up," George exclaimed, "the next thing you know we'll end up by adopting the Townsend plan."

"Maybe that wouldn't be such a bad idea after all," snapped Senator Brewster of Maine, who has been strongly backed by Townsendites in past elections. For the next 15 minutes, Brewster gave a lecture on the virtues of providing oldsters pensions through a direct 3 per cent tax of individual gross incomes.

"Eighty to 90 per cent of our people over 65 are indigent or dependent," declared the Senator from Maine. "The Social Security system hasn't solved this problem, which is a disgrace in a great, progressive Nation like this. Under the Townsend plan, administrative costs would be greatly reduced for there would be no investigative work to determine need. Everybody reaching 65 would automatically be entitled to a pension."

Despite smiles on the faces of Bob Taft of Ohio and Harry Byrd of Virginia, Brewster tartly reminded his colleagues that he was "dead serious" and had always "believed in the Townsend plan."

For a time, it appeared that the Maine Republican might win some converts, especially when Democrat Alben Barkley of Kentucky declared that he would be inclined to support Brewster's views "if war veterans wouldn't be discriminated against in what you propose."

At this point, however, the Senate buzzer, calling the Senate into session, broke up the meeting and Brewster's lecture on old-age pensions.

Good Example

There are so many ways in life . . . Of doing good on earth . . . To help some individual . . . Appreciate its worth . . . And out of all the ways there are . . . The best is not to 'each . . . To threaten, argue or command . . . And surely not to preach . . . But just to live unselfishly . . . And to be good and true . . . And treat another as you wish . . . That he would favor you . . . To set a good example by . . . Your conduct every day . . . Your actual accomplishments . . . And all the things you say . . . Because a good example is . . . The best that we can give . . . To bring about a better world . . . In which to work and live.

THE Rounded Hip Line

Curved Contour on the New Rounded Silhouette Inspired by Christian Dior

Mark well this rounded new influence on feminine fashions. Mark well the illusion of slimness it lends your figure . . . sumptuous proportions it gives your silhouette. The rounded hipline effects a tiny, hand-clasp look to your waist . . . follows the new softer, more rounded shoulders . . . the new dipping hemlines. Praises to the remarkable French Dior for inspiring the lines that are a direct compliment to you, the American woman.
